PARLIAMENTARY LETTER

Ottawa, Sept. 30th—If there was any doubt as to the reception awaiting Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King and his Liberal candidates throughout the Dominion, that doubt must have been dispelled by the splendid spontaneous welcome given to Mr. King, and accompanying speakers in all the cities which he has visited since firing the opening gun of his campaign in the Toronto meeting which was held in the constituency of West York. At Toronto the Ravina Rink was crowded with persons anxious to hear Mr. King and Mr. Fielding discuss the important questions of the day. Again in Montreal, two days later, an immense crowd gathered in the Arena Rink to hear Mr. King, Sir Lomer Gouin, Hon. R. Lemieux, Premier Taschereau and others uphold the principles of Liberalism. At Sherbrooke, the next evening, thousands of citizens stood on the sidewalks to cheer the Liberal leader as he drove in an automobile at the head of a long parade, from the station to His Majesty's theatre, which was packed to the doors by electors who were anxious to hear Mr. King, Dr. Beland, George Boivin and other speakers.

Perhaps the finest demonstrations of public interest in Liberalism were given when the Liberal leader reached Amherst, N. S., and Turo, on Saturday evening. Although only notified at noon that Mr. King would pass through the city, the citizens of both cities had arranged a demonstration in his honor. Headed by a brass band, nearly two thousand persons had gathered at the stations and on the arrival of the train they demanded that Mr. King use the few moments available, while the train stood in the station, to addres them. In each city Mr. King delivered a splendid fighting speech, being cheered to the echo at its conclusion.

* * *

The Liberal leader was loudly cheered as he told of the fight made by the Liberal Opposition in the House and out of it to secure for the people their rights from an autocrat government. Not satisfied with holding off the election until a time suitable to its own ends, the government took a new step in autocracy by announcing through the Prime Minister that there would be dissolution, and then refusing to give the people information as to the date of the election until it was perfectly ready to do so. That the people had a right to that information mattered no to the Prime Minister, who paid no attention to the fact that business was being held up while he made his trip to the West. Until dissolution was announced, and the merchants and others knew the date of the election, there would inevitably be restricted business. Mr. King showed in this and other such things as that made no difference to Mr. Meighen.

* * *

The government propaganda artist who assured his readers that the leader of the Liberal party had made up his mind to run away from a campaign in North York has had a hard time squaring his arguments this week. Mr. King announced in Montreal that he was a candidate in North York, and was in the fight there to win. That stand has strengthened him with Liberals all over the Dominion, and has drawn to his colors many who were formerly hesitating between Liberalism and one of the other followings. The North York fight will be a three-cornered one, but the Liberal leader has laid the foundation there for a successful fight for victory. If the Farmer candidate goes through with his campaign he may succeed in dividing the forces.

Prince County (P.E.I.) Liberals were also anxious to have Mr. King as their candidate and promised a walk-over if the leader would consent to be the candidate there. Mr. King, however, consulted the National Liberal Committee and it was decided to have the leader stand in North York where he had announced his candidature. A strong and influential deputation from Prince County had come to Ottawa at their own expense to ask Mr. King to run there, but when his decision to run in North York was announced, they were the first to send a telegram of congratulations.

* * *

Another story which the government propagandists have had to swallow was that of the split among Quebec Liberals. According to their views, freely expressed through the government organs, there was to be a wholesale breach among the Quebec Liberals, with Sir Lomer Gouin, Hon. R. Lemieux and a number of others breaking away from the present party. The absurdity of such reports was shown when at the Lemieux anniversary banquet in Montreal, both Sir Lomer and Mr. Lemieux announced without any hesitation or equivocation, that they were members of the Liberal party, proud to include themselves as such under the leadership of the man who had shown himself so capable of conducting the affairs of the country.

And then, to make the cup of the government organs more bitter still, the Deputy Speaker of the House, George Boivin, announced at Sherbrooke that all the reports of his joining or considering joining the Meighen Government, had been so much poppycock. The fact that he was deputy speaker of the House, had of course, prevented Mr. Boivin from making any announcements until the Prime Minister announced dissolution and reorganized his cabinet in preparation for an election, but as soon as Mr. Boivin could speak he made it abundantly clear that he was a Mackenzie King Liberal, as are all Liberals to-day, and that he was in the fight to victory under Mr. King's leadership.

* * *

Mr. Boivin, in his Sherbrooke speech, showed the folly of the Prime Minister's tariff claims. The Premier, said Mr. Boivin, had tried to make the people believe that the Liberals were Free Traders. In the next breath he claimed that the Conservative party, when it took office in 1911, had reduced the tariff as it was left by the Liberals. "If the Liberals are Free Traders, as the Prime Minister claims, how on earth could the Conservatives make reductions in a Liberal tariff, when Free Trade means no tariff," Mr. Boivin asked.

* * *

The Liberal Leader this week continues his tour of the Maritime Provinces, addressing meetings in all the principle cities and having the assistance of such speakers as Premier G. H. Murray, D. D. McKenzie, Hon. H. S. Beland, Ernest Lapointe, William Duff, Dr. W. Chisholm and others. The Liberal party are being given splendid receptions in all cities and overflow meetings seem likely to be the order of the day or evening. One thing has become increasingly apparent as Mr. King's tour continues, and that is that the people of Canada are heartily sick of the Meighen autocratic despotism, and demand a change to Liberal government, in order to reduce the national debt, ensure economy, and bring down the cost of living, which affects every man, woman and child in the dominion.

OTTAWA, Sept. 26.—The long-anticipated clean-up in Hull will be started this week. It is learned that orders have been sent from the Quebec Attorney-General's Department to wipe out the "blind pigs" in Hull. To this end the hand of the Collector of Revenues, Mr. J. T. Purcell, has been strengthened by two additions to his staff. A conservative estimate places the number of whiskey dens in Hull at 100.

EDWARD J. SEXSMITH CHOICE OF U. F. O.

At a very largely attended meeting of the United Farmers for the counties of Lennox and Addington, held in the town hall Friday afternoon, Edward J. Sexsmith, a farmer who resides near Selby, was chosen standard bearer for the U. F. O. in the Dominion elections. The meeting was very enthusiastic, which was shown by the fact that sixteen or seventeen were nominated for the position. Mr. Sexsmith was elected on the second ballot, when he received 171 votes. M. N. Empey, president of the U.F.O. for the county, was second with 36 votes, Irwin Sexsmith was third with 28 votes, and W. H. Hunter was fourth with 22 votes. Messrs. Empey, Sexsmith and Hunter asked that the selection be made unanimous.

When the meeting opened at 1.30 o'clock, Mr. Empey, who acted as chairman, called for nominations and the following names were submitted: James T. Wilson, Strathcona; M. N. Empey, Napanee R.M.D.; E. H. Sills, Napanee R.M.D.; Fred Perry, Napanee; E. J. Sexsmith, Selby; Wm. Shell, Napanee R.M.D.; A. C. Parks, Napanee R.M.D.; M. C. Burgess, Napanee; Irwin Sexsmith, Napanee R.M.D.; J. L. Haycock, Adolphustown; F. L. Bogart, Gosport; C. W. Vandervoort, Napanee R.M. D.; W. H. Hunter, Napanee; Thos. Chalmers, Napanee R.M.D.; W. J. Allen, Napanee R.M.D.; and C. T. Loyst, Bath. Before the vote was taken, Messrs. Wilson, William Shell, A. C. Parks, J. L. Haycock, Thos. Chalmers, and W. J. Allen asked that their names be withdrawn.

The result of the first ballot was as follows: E. J. Sexsmith, 113; M. N. Empey, 36; W. H. Hunter, 29; Irwin Sexsmith, 28; M. C. Burgess, 18; E. H. Sills, 13; C. W. Vandervort, 11; Fred Perry, 11; C. T. Loyst, 2.

The gathering was one of the largest held in the history of the county. Although the weather was very disagreeable on account of the rain and wind, the hall was crowded to the doors.

When Mr. Sexsmith was called to the platform after the result of the vote had been announced, he thanked the people for the trust they had placed in him by selecting him as the standard bearer in the coming election. He made it clear that he had never solicited the position, and, if elected he would do his best to serve all classes of people. With the King he would promise nothing, but he would try and practice economy. The speaker took a swing at the members of the Dominion house who voted an increased indemnity and at the same time had neglected to provide for soldiers who had needed help. He believed that the tariff should be revised. In closing his remarks, he stated that he believed this was a work which was given to him by a Higher Power, and that he would not betray the trust which had been placed in his hands. He was loudly applauded before rising to speak.

One would gather after attending the meeting that no person but a farmer actually working the land was wanted as a candidate in Lennox and Addington. When the meeting opened, the chairman announced that at an executive meeting held in the morning it was decided that no one but a farmer would be accepted. This meant that M. C. Burgess and Fred Perry, who were nominated as candidates, would not be eligible.

Mr. Burgess asked for a ruling in his case, as he stated he had been a farmer all his life, and only recently given up his farm on account of illness in his family, and was now as much in accord with the farmers' movement as he ever was. After some minutes of discussion, the chairman asked for a showing of hands of all those who were willing that Mr. Burgess be allowed to address the gathering, and also that his name appear on the ballot. The vote was in favor of Mr. Burgess, and he spoke to the meeting.

The case of Fred Perry, who is a merchant in Napanee, was also dealt with in a like manner, and he was allowed to express his views to the convention. Mr. Perry stated that although not a member of the U.F.O. at the present time, he was in sympathy with their platform.

At the suggestion of several in the audience the chairman asked all the candidates who had been nominated to give five-minute addresses. E. H. Sills, who was first called, stated that he was not in perfect accord with all the principles of the U.F.O. He contended that public ownership of the railroads would lead the country to disaster. The speaker remarked that recently when he was travelling on one of the government trains, he found the train well equipped with ticket takers and conductors, but there were no men to clean the dirt off the seats. He acknowledged that he had always been a high tariff man and he believed that he had been mistaken in his views in this respect.

M. N. Empey stated that he believed in the U. F. O. platform, and if the gathering saw fit to select him as their candidate he would do his best to fill the office. Irwin Sexsmith stated that he believed in the principles of the U.F.O. and would not give blind support to party government. He told the gathering that if they did not see fit to select him as candidate he would give his whole support to the man of their choice.

W. H. Hunter told the convention that if they saw fit to pick him as their standard bearer he would do his best to fill the office. First of all he would be honest.

C. W. Vandervoort had been a mechanic and had never plowed a furrow until he was forty years of age. The speaker charged that Premier Meighen in his promise that the government, which he represented, would provide a pool for the grain, was only trying to catch the farmers. And more than that he was only copying what Hon. Manning Doherty had done. This proposal was the dying kick of the government.

M. C. Burgess told of his connection with the U.F.O. movement. He was one of the prime movers, and although not working his farm he had only done so on account of the illness of his daughter. He was still an enthusiastic follower of the U.F.O. When dealing with the question of tariff, he said that he could not understand why an automobile, which sold across the border for $950 should be $1,600 in Canada. He contended that the farmers had no protection.

It was nearly six o'clock when the meeting was brought to a close. The members of the U.F. O. in Lennox and Addington are fully confident that they will be able to elect their man in the coming election.

TOWN COUNCIL MEETING

Council Chamber,
October 3rd, 1921

Council met in regular session, Mayor M. P. Graham presiding.

Councillors present—Messrs. Reeve Boyes, Paul, Roblin, Wilson, Ming, Hartman, Steacy, Paul.

Minutes of last regular meeting were read and adopted.

A communication from the Daly Tea Co. re taxes on storehouse, asking for rebate for balance of year.

On motion rebate was ordered paid.

A communication from the Bell Telephone Co. re increased rates; also one from the Ontario Municipal Association, in reference thereto were ordered filed.

A communication from Rev. A. J. Wilson re income taxes, claiming that he has been overcharged on income for three or four years, and asking for a rebate for this year.

On motion a rebate of $15.60 was made to correct the error.

Coun. Ming moved, seconded by Coun. Steacy, that a light be placed on the corner of Pearl and Ontario streets, South Napanee. Carried.

On motion a light was ordered placed at the front of the Gibbard factory on Canal street.

An application from Mr. H. J. Bristol and others to have a light on Piety Hill changed, was referred to the Fire, Water and Light Committee to report.

The Police Committee reported recommending the appointment of Mr. A. E. Cook as night constable at a salary of $75.00 per month; also that he be appointed Sanitary Inspector at a salary of $100 per year; also that he be granted $100 for moving expenses.

Report adopted.

Reeve Boyes introduced the question of a reclassification of the charges to property owners for street paving. Mr. Boyes was of the opinion that the town as a whole was paying too large a proportion, and that the business properties were not paying enough, and would be out of proportion to the amount which would have to be charged property holders on any other streets which might have to be paved in future. The town as a whole at present is charged with all overcharges on the pavement, and the property owners are only charged with their proportion of the original contract.

A motion to reconsider the apportionment of cost was lost.

A motion that the assessment rolls for Dundas street paving be not considered as final until the figures have been checked, was carried.

Coun. Paul moved, seconded by Coun. Roblin, that the Highways Department be requested to carry out their promise and assume the highway down Roblin's hill to the bridge. Carried.

The Place for Spinsters.

There is not a single British Dominion, properly so-called, in which the male population is not in a majority over the tender sex. So that English spinsters have the freest choice if their sole desire is to find a husband. But the prospect of finding a husband is one thing; that of long domestic happiness, in which a man and a woman strive equally to earn prosperity and to rear a family in contentment and hope is another. They may not be inseparable, but they are not likely to be united unless both parties to a marriage in such circumstances know what they are about and fully realise their present prospects and future responsibilities. Some English girls would be as likely to succeed as a farmer's wife in Australia or Canada as a dairymaid from Devonshire would as a millinery saleswoman in Bond street.

FIRST IMPRESSIONS
Mean a Great Deal in this world.

When a visitor first enters a house, either in a personal or business capacity, the impression made by the furnishings may guide their whole future conduct towards you.

Be wise—plan that your furniture creates a good first impression.

And what can make a more pleasing impression than to see a neat cozy looking CHESTERFIELD ?
A visitor will always choose a Chesterfield to rest upon and will leave your home remarking about the comfort and beauty of it.

For the long winter evenings that are ahead of us, you will want a good comfortable Chesterfield to sit on or to lie on.

Now is the Time to Buy

Prices are reduced about 40 per cent., and on some they are cut in half. We have a splendid assortment of Tapestries to choose from, so that at present you do not have to make your selection from a few.

CALL AND GET OUR PRICES IF YOU ARE AT ALL INTERESTED, AS IT WILL BE A PLEASURE FOR US TO SHOW YOU OUR LINE.

Famous House of Glencoe

LADY MARJORIE DALRYMPLE, six foot three in stature, who arrived in America recently to embark upon a business career, and to establish branches in the United States for a large concern dealing in all classes of suede goods, is the only unmarried sister of the present and twelfth Earl of Stair, and was decorated by King George last year with the Cross of Officer of the Order of the British Empire for her work in the war hospitals.

Contrary to popular belief, neither the present Lord Stair, nor yet his sister, is descended from the so-called Glencoe earl who is on record as having been the principal instigator of the terrible massacre of Glencoe. Lady Marjorie may therefore consider herself as quite immune from the historic Curse of Glencoe. The curse was a long one, covering much ground. But it provided among other things, that King William III., who signed the decree for the massacre, and that Campbell of Glenlyon, leader of the band who perpetrated it, should die childless, and that with regard to Lord Stair, no succeeding earl should have three sons until his wickedness in countersigning the decree and ordering the massacre, as Secretary of State, had been expiated.

The "Glencoe" Lord Stair scoffed at these curses, and in order to show his contempt for them tied up a considerable portion of his extensive property so that it could only be inherited by a third son of an Earl of Stair. This property remained tied up in this fashion and increased in value by compound interest and otherwise during two centuries. No less than seven or eight of the following Earls of Stair died without issue, and the curse did not seem to diminish in intensity until the honors and estates passed to the posterity of a younger brother of the Glencoe earl.

In fact, the tenth earl was the first of his line to have three sons, and on his death in 1903 all the accumulations of the property tied up by the Glencoe earl went to his third son, Col. Hew Hamilton Dalrymple, late member of Parliament for Wigtownshire and a confirmed bachelor of over sixty.

The "Glencoe earl's" eldest sister, the Hon. Janet Dalrymple, was the heroine of Sir Walter Scott's popular novel, "The Bride of Lammermoor," and according to Sir Robert Dalrymple-Elphinstone's letter, printed in the Edinburgh Evening Post, dated September 21, 1829, she had been forced by her mother, Lady Stair, to relinquish Lord Rutherford, to whom she had solemnly plighted her troth, and to wed instead, against her will, David Dunbar, elest son of Sir David Dunbar of Baldoon.

On the wedding night a frightful turmoil and screams were heard to proceed from the bridal chamber and when the door was forced open the bridegroom was found on the floor, weltering in his blood, stabbed in a dozen different places, while the bride had become a raving maniac, in which condition she continued until her death, less than a month afterward. The bridegroom eventually recovered, but absolutely refused to give any explanation of the tragedy and was killed by a fall from his horse within the precincts of the royal palace of Holyrood at Edinburgh a few years later.

The second Earl of Stair and the immediate successor of the Glencoe peer, who achieved so much celebrity in Paris and Versailles as British Ambassador, devoting his time to frustrating the intrigues of the Stuart Pretender. He bore a wonderful resemblance to Louis XIV., who did not, however, like him. On one occasion, when surrounded by his court, the French ruler, with the amiable object of slighting the ambassador's mother, remarked to him, "I am told, my lord, that you and I are somewhat alike. May I ask, did your mother ever live in Paris?"

Quick as a flash Lord Stair replied, "No, sire, but my father did." A pointed retort to which the king had nothing to say in reply.

It was after this that Louis XIV., who had conceived a considerable respect for the earl's gift of repartee, declared him to be the most perfectly mannered man that he had ever met, mentioning as an illustration thereof that when he had beckoned the earl to enter the royal carriage first, the ambassador had done so, with a low bow, and without more ado. "A less polite man," remarked the Grande Monarque, "would have deprecated the honor, and would have begged me to take precedence of him, instead of at once obeying my directions."

The annals of the house of Dalrymple have furnished the theme for many other romances besides Sir Walter Scott's novel, "The Bride of Lammermoor." Indeed, the matrimonial experiences of the seventh earl, who died a little over a century ago, have proved a perfect gold mine to playwrights and authors. For having married the young and loving daughter of the then Countess of Dysart, the union was dissolved a couple of years later, on the demand of a woman of evil reputation, with whom Lord Stair, while still a bachelor, had been unfortunate enough to spend a few days as man and wife at an inn at Perth. This, according to Scottish marriage law, was sufficient to constitute a common law marriage. Nor was it until ten years afterward that the earl was able to secure freedom from this woman, on the tardy discovery that she had already a husband living at the time that she stayed with him at Perth. Before this, however, Lord Stair's real wife had died.

A STRANGE CRIME.

Man Once Hanged In England for Blackening His Face.

Most people know that until recent years the list of capital offences was a long one; but few would believe at first sight that a man was hanged in England in the middle of the eighteenth century, against whom the only charge was that he had obstructed the police with his face blackened.

At that time there existed in London a large number of sanctuaries, or places of refuge for debtors and other offenders against the law.

In the reign of William III. a law was passed which put an end to this right of sanctuary; but this did not deter the Minters, who, on being ejected from their own place, set up a new sanctuary, called the Seven Cities of Refuge.

One Sunday morning police officers managed to arrest a notorious member of the Seven Cities. The other members, after a long and strenuous fight, rescued him and brought him back, together with some of his captors. The latter were whipped and afterwards ducked in an open sewer.

Having passed through this ordeal, the officers complained to the magistrates. The only person whom they could identify was an old criminal named Charles Towers, who had taken part in the riot with his face and chest blackened with soot. He was arrested, but as it could not be proved that he had had anything to do with the whipping or ducking, the only charge preferred against him was that he had obstructed the police with his face blackened. There had been a few years previously a notorious gang of poachers, known as the Waltham Blacks, who went to work masked and with blackened faces. In order to put an end to their activities a law was passed making this form of disguise an offence punishable by death. The wretched Towers was found guilty and hanged actually for the offence of having a blackened face.

Boxing Bishops.

Some years ago the Bishop of Sodor and Man, while driving with his wife, was attacked by two ruffians who demanded money.

He jumped from the carriage, whip in hand, and set about the miscreants, who was driven off.

New Zealand had a famous bishop named Selwyn. A more humble man never existed. In his youth he had frequently delighted his university friends by his prowess with the gloves. On his appointment as Bishop of New Zealand, he became zealous in the cause of the Maoris. A section of the people resented his interference, and one night he was attacked by a half-drunken Englishman who hit him on the cheek.

The bishop immediately turned the other side of his face and the ruffian was not slow to avail himself of the opportunity. Then the meek Selwyn took off his coat.

"My Bible," he said, "tells me to turn the other cheek when one is smitten. But, it gives me discretionary power when that is done." Then he set about his assailant and left him in the gutter.

Birmingham produced another muscular Christian in Rev. J. Haworth. On one occasion while walking in the city he saw a policeman struggling violently with a burly ruffian.

The guardian of the peace was having a bad time with his brutal assailant and was nearly exhausted. The dean was not young, but the vision of university days came to him and, seizing the bully, he soon placed him out of action.

Samples Supplied.

A clergyman was very fond of a particularly hot brand of pickles, and finding great difficulty in procuring them at hotels when traveling, invariably carried a bottle with him.

One day, when dining at a restaurant with his pickles in front of him, a stranger sat down at the same table. Soon he asked the clergyman to pass the pickles.

The divine did as he was requested, and in a few seconds had the satisfaction of seeing the stranger watering at the eyes and gasping for breath.

"I see by your dress," said the man when he had recovered, "that you are a parson."

"I am, sir."

"I suppose you preach?"

"Yes, about twice a week, usually."

"Do you ever preach about Hades?" inquired the stranger.

"Why, yes. Sometimes I deem it my duty to remind my congregation of eternal punishment."

"I thought so," said the stranger; "but you are the first of your class I ever met who carried samples."

Bridal Arch of Soda Siphons.

Bridal arches of billiard cues, pint pots, and golf clubs have been novel features at recent weddings.

Mr. Ernest Nailard, secretary of a firm of mineral water manufacturers, and his bride passed under an arch of empty soda-water siphons held aloft by twenty-four employes of the company as they left St. Nicholas Church, Brighton, after their wedding.

An emblematic arch denoting the calling of the bridegroom may one day become as necessary to the marriage ceremony as a striped pole is to mark the location of a barber's shop.

Life-Saving Buoy.

A useful invention is the line-carrying buoy. Its inventor sought to devise some means of getting a line from ship to shore, and the line-carrying buoy was the result.

When released from the ship, if the wind is in the right direction, it blows steadily towards the shore, the line unwinding behind it as it goes, until finally the buoy is dragged out of the surf with the line intact.

In addition to its use in this manner, it is available for all the regular purposes of the ordinary buoy.

Hard Times Have Reached The Palaces of England

Tours of Prince Costly

TO-DAY King George simply could not afford to entertain, or be entertained by a great European monarch, according to a retired member of the Royal Household, writing in Answers. The same anonymous dignitary is authority for the statement that the Prince of Wales is the richest member of the royal family, but even he has to save up thousands of pounds against the day of marriage, when an establishment will have to be set up.

And to save is not an easy thing for the Heir Apparent to do under present conditions. The prince's tours cost him far more than the sum voted by Parliament for these purposes. The visit of the prince to Canada and the United States cost him at least $50,000 more than the Parliamentary vote.

The poorest member of the royal family is Queen Alexandra. Her majesty's allowance from the state is $350,000 per annum, but that falls far below the cost of maintaining Marlborough House and Sandringham. Although living in comparative retirement, the Queen Mother is only just able to make both ends meet, and that she could not do but for her private resources, which are by no means large.

The cost of living has hit the palaces and refuses to come down. One reason is that members of the households hold that amount to permanent Government appointments; the King cannot discharge them and they must be pensioned or otherwise fully compensated. The increase in wages and salaries has been nearly $100,000 per annum over the 1914 figure. Allowances for board are up $65,000 per annum and the annual laundry bill has jumped from $25,000 to $55,000.

The Queen's dress bills amount to less than $3,500, because pre-war dresses are altered and few new ones purchased. The Princess Mary has ordered but six new dresses since the armistice. The King has not ordered one new suit since coming out of khaki. Menus are rigorously cut down. Special trains are no longer used when their majesties travel.

Although the income received by his majesty from the state is $2,350,000 per year, very hard times are being experienced by the whole royal family. High taxes as well as high prices affect them. Not a penny of the $2,350,000 reaches the King's private purse to-day; in the best times the saving was never more than $125,000. To-day the King spends annually $125,000 out of his own private income to meet expenses that cannot possibly be cut down.

In only one factor is there a saving. There are few royal visits to be exchanged. Before the war at least one of the more prominent monarchs had to be entertained and one or another visited each year. The visit of a reigning monarch to the English court used to cost the King $50,000, this being over and above state grants. The entire cost of a visit to a foreign capital used to be borne by the King and amounted to about $25,000. There are few "first-class" monarchs left and this drain on the private resources of the House of Windsor is eliminated.

To show how closely the need for economy comes home, the royal breakfast table at Buckingham Palace used to have Russian tea for King George, at twelve shillings a pound. This favorite sort is now unobtainable and His Majesty drinks water for breakfast instead. Boiled haddock, fruit and a glass of water is the sovereign's breakfast. The menu has been reduced from six to three items, and the dinner menu from twelve to four, except when their majesties entertain.

Insect Samsons.

If a man could jump as far as a flea can in proportion to his size, he could leap with ease over the dome of St. Paul's Cathedral. Were he as agile as the common grasshopper, two or three bounds would take him in a twinkling from his office to his house.

A flea suspended in a minute slip will grasp a match-stick and juggle with it as though it were a mere nothing. Were a man equally strong he could top with a giant forest tree weighing five or six tons.

The ant thinks nothing of dragging a piece of wood fifty times his own weight; while if he falls off a leaf a hundred times his own height from the ground, he does not hurt himself.

If our appetite were as great as those of caterpillars we should each require more than a ton of food every week.

Could we but learn all that the bee knows about flying, we might soar into the air in airplanes whose wings were no more than four feet across, and whose engines were no stronger than those of motor cycles.

Backward Children.

In the good old times some people love to talk about there was an established custom and belief that backward children would be cured by making an incision in certain parts of their ears if the operation was made at the right time of the moon, and the belief persists in some parts of rural England.

A New Version.

Cyril—"It is better to have loved and lost——"

Ralph—"Oh, yes, than wed, and be for ever bossed."

AN AMIR IN LONDON.

He Took His Wives to See "Chu Chin Chow."

The Amir of Katsima, Nigeria, accompanied by two of the four wives permitted him by the Koran, his fifteen-year-old son, and a body of Nigerian veterans to guard his harem, paid a state visit to London recently. On his way around the world to Mecca the monarch decided to stop in the British capital to offer his respects to the King and spend a busy week in sight-seeing.

England, accustomed as she is to visits by foreign royalty, left nothing undone to keep the amir amused. He called at the Mansion House to see the Lord Mayor and sat, stately and dignified, in the Lord Mayor's chair. He went to see the zoo, the mint, the Bank of England and the Bank of West Africa. He expressed delight at the sight of the lions in captivity at the zoo, adding solemnly: "Our forefathers were meat for his forefathers."

The amir's wives were permitted to accompany him to "Chu Chin Chow," where, hooded and veiled, they occupied a box in full view of the audience. They spent the rest of the week in the harem at the Midland Hotel, St. Pancras, where women visitors were received. Both princesses said that they admired Western women's clothes and hats, but were perfectly content with their turbans.

The decision to take the wives to the theatre was a complete reversal of precedent on the amir's part. On the second day of his sojourn he exclaimed suddenly to G. W. Webster, a senior resident of Nigeria, who is a member of the Mecca-bound party: "Why should I not let the women see the theater? It is not forbidden by the laws of your country." Closed taxicabs were ordered to a private entrance of the hotel and the two women were whisked downtown in time for the first act.

Alfonso and Our Prince.

There could hardly be a greater contrast than that shown by the King of Spain and the Prince of Wales in playing their own parts when before the world, says the London Mail. Alfonso arrives at a ball with his moustacios flicked up high, his breast covered with orders, out to be the regular royal king. If he greets his English friends he does it in the English way, and calls a taxi-man (and he takes any number of taxis when in London) "Cabby," in the jolliest way. But does he congratulate a Spanish subject on winning in a tennis tournament, or dancing in a ballet? Why, then he is like Velasques, stepping out of his frame, all kindly beams and salaams—the first gentleman of Europe.

The Prince of Wales plays up differently. He seems much less than his 27 summers. His deprecatory, naive way with old Service men, with foreigners and the girls he dances with, delights them. He is so keen, by the way, on dancing that once he starts he hates to stop.

So the prince is learning a bit of Welsh. Very heroic of him. Why is he so entitled? Because, somewhere in the thirteenth century, Queen Eleanor of England gave birth to a prince while with the King in Wales, and the prince was humorously presented to the Welsh as a Prince of Wales, "because he could speak no English." The [illegible] with the Welsh, and the heir to the crown has been "Prince of Wales" ever since.

Two Famous Jewels.

London is returning to India two famous Mogul jewels which have shared adventures with the celebrated Koh-i-noor diamond. The jewels are to be restored to one of the great Indian museums, and Delhi has been suggested as their eventual resting place.

The jewels were made for the Mogul Emperor Shah Jahan about 1650. After the sack of Delhi in 1739 these and other treasures were carried off by the ruler of Persia and Afghanistan, Nadir Shah; the fugitive Shah Sujah restored them to Ranjit Sing at Lahore in 1813; in 1849 they were bought by the Governor-General of that time, Lord Dalhousie, eventually passing to his daughter, and after her death to the Victoria and Albert Museum, in London.

Each jewel is carved from a single stone. One is an emerald bow ring, intended to protect the left thumb when a strained bow string is released, and the other is an emerald toilet cup, mounted in gold jeweled with rubies, the foot being chased and partly overlaid with translucent gold enamel.

To Safeguard Boy Scouts.

A bill has just been presented in the House of Lords designed to safeguard the Boy Scout movement. The measure provides that:

"No unauthorized person shall use the name of Boy Scout or any similar title calculated to imply membership;

"Wear any uniform adopted for the time being by the association as a uniform for Boy Scouts;

"Wear or use any badge or distinctive mark in such a manner as to imply membership."

It is proposed that a fine not to exceed forty shillings shall be the penalty for each offence, though it shall not apply to plays, circus or cinema performances, "provided the uniform or badge is not used in such a manner as to bring it into contempt."

A Lover of Peace.

"And you call yourself a lover of peace!" said Mr. Rafferty.

"I do," answered Mr. Dolan.

"After intentionally droppin' the brick on Casey's head?"

"Yes, I've never known Casey to be so peaceful as he was just after I dropped that brick."

More harm is done by the cowardice of those who are afraid to do that which is right than by the courage of those who do wrong.

Can You Talk "Aussie"?

MOST people imagine that the Australians speak the same language as we do. And so they do, up to a point. Nevertheless, there are multitudes of words, and even entire phrases which, although in common use "down under," are quite unknown and unintelligible to the average Briton.

Who is there amongst us, for instance, who is familiar with "yakker" as a synonym for hard toil, with "gazob," meaning a fool or blunderer; or who would imagine that "prad" is Aussie for horse?

"Furphy" would probably prove equally puzzling to most of us. It means an idle rumor, a canard.

Conversely, "the straight griffin" stands for the truth, secret reliable information.

"Guyver" is make-believe, to "crack a boo" is to divulge a secret, and to "crack hardy" is to keep one inviolate. "Bonzer" is an adjective expressing the superlative of excellence. A "cliner" is a young unmarried female. The highest compliment an Aussia can pay his "best girl" is to call her a "bonzer cliner," and it will probably lead to her giving him a "smooge"—that is, a cuddle, or even a "mug," meaning a long-drawn-out lover's kiss.

A "tug" is a rough, uncouth fellow. A "skiter" is a boaster. A "cobber" is a boon companion, a "pal." To "sprag" is to accost truculently, and is usually the prelude to a "stush," that is, a bout with fists.

"Ribuck" means correct, genuine. Hence an interjection signifying assent. But the hardest-worked Australian word of this character is the little monosyllable "ar." Used invariably as an exclamation, it is capable of expressing joy, sorrow, surprise, and a variety of other emotions, according to the manner of utterance.

To intervene without invitation in a conversation or an argument is to "back the barrer," or, as we should say, to "butt in." A "coot" is a person of no account, an outsider. "Dinkum" means honest, straightforward. "The dinkum oil" is the straight truth.

An eccentric or amusing person is a "finger." A "peb" is a "tough," a "larrikin"—an abbreviation of the word pebble.

"Shicker" is intoxicating liquor, and a man who has imbibed not wisely but too well is said to be "shick" or "shickered." Whisky is "snake juice," and anyone who is quarrelsome in his cups is "snake-headed." Or he may be loquacious and start to "spruik," that is, deliver a long harangue about nothing in particular.

"Sool" is a favorite exclamation of the spectators at a cricket or football match, on the racecourse, and at the ringside. It means that the time has arrived for a player, or jockey, or boxer, as the case may be, to put forth his utmost effort in order to win. Should he fail he is greeted with a chorus of "imshee," meaning begone, take yourself off.

"Dickin" is a term signifying disgust or disbelief. "Chiack" is vulgar banter, or coarse invective. "Derry" stands for aversion, dislike, and hence a feud.

"Buckley's chance" is Aussie for a forlorn hope, no chance at all, or so slight as hardly to be worth taking account of. The phrase is in constant use, but who Buckley was, or what constituted his particular million-to-one chance, noboby seems to know.

To "toss in the alley" means to give up the ghost, to die. A beaten man who gives in is said to "sky the rag," that is, to throw a towel into the air in token of surrender, a simile borrowed, of course, from the prize-ring. Such a one is "sent to the pack," in plain English, relegated to obscurity, in which case he may very likely ejaculate "mafeesh," meaning, "I am finished."

"Dear old Loo," in the mouth of an Aussie, has no reference to a woman. "Loo" is a contraction of Woolloomooloo, originally a suburb of Sydney; but the word is now frequently used as a sort of affectionate designation for the city as a whole.

To "poke mullock" is to deride, to tease. A man who is angered or foiled is said to be "narked," while to say of an individual that his "name is mud" means that he is utterly discredited, of no account whatever.

Smallest Passenger Train.

The tiny Eskdale railroad, running between Ravenglass and Boot, in England, is not a toy railroad, though it looks like one. It was originally constructed for mineral traffic, but is now much used by sightseers in the lake district, and from Boot many delightful excursions may be made.

The gage is only fifteen inches, and the rails, designed for heavy traffic, weigh forty pounds a yard. The little locomotives are a triumph of engineering skill. The boiler is six feet six inches long, the working steam pressure 130 pounds.

There are two types of cars. One, for summer use, is roofless, and the other is enclosed.

Lotteries.

Government lotteries are in full swing every day in Siam. The betting is on the 34 letters of the alphabet, and the winning letter is drawn every night at hazard from a bag. Those who have been lucky enough to stake their money on the winning letter get back 30 times the amount of their stake.

YOUNG GIRLS NEED CARE

Mothers! Watch Your Daughters' Health

Health Is Happiness

From the time a girl reaches the age of twelve until womanhood is established she needs all the care the thoughtful mother can give.

The condition that the girl is then passing through is so critical and may have such far-reaching effects upon her future happiness and health that it is almost criminal for a mother or guardian to withhold counsel or advice.

Many a woman has suffered years of prolonged pain and misery through having been the victim of thoughtlessness or ignorance on the part of those who should have guided her through the dangers and difficulties that beset this period.

Mothers should teach their girls what danger comes from standing around with cold or wet feet, from lifting heavy articles, and from overworking. Do not let her overstudy. If she complains of headache, pains in the back and lower limbs, or if you notice a slowness of thought, nervousness or irritability on the part of your daughter, make life easier for her. She needs thoughtful care for a few years.

In all such cases Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound should be given as it is especially adapted for such conditions. It contains nothing that can injure and can be taken in perfect safety.

Read how Mrs. Eicher helped her daughter. She says:

"At the age of sixteen my daughter was having trouble every month. She had pains across her back and in her sides. Every month her back would pain her so she could not do her work and would have to lie down. My married daughter recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I read the books which were left at my door. She took it faithfully and is now regular and has no pain. We recommend the Vegetable Compound and give you permission to publish this letter in your little books and in the newspapers."—Mrs. KATIE EICHER, 4064 N. Fairhill St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Mrs. Williams will profit by her own experience. She says:

"When I was thirteen years old I had sick spells each month and as I was very backward I would bear the pain and my mother knew nothing about it. I read in the daily paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and took my own spending money and bought a bottle. It helped me so much that I took it regularly after that until I had taken two bottles and I did not have any more pain or backache and have been a healthy, strong woman. I am now 29 years old and have a little girl of my own, and when she gets old enough I shall give her none other than Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. C. E. WILLIAMS, 2437 W. Toronto St., Philadelphia, Pa.

For almost fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been relieving women, young and old, of ailments peculiar to their sex. Ask your neighbor about it, for in every neighborhood there are women who know of its merits.

Thousands of letters similar to the above are in the files of the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., and for years such letters have been published. Surely it is worth your while to make a fair trial of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent to you free upon request. Write to The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

The Red Sea.

The name by which the Hebrews knew the Red Sea—the Yan Suph, or sea of weeds of sedge — would appear to give little indication of the reason for the title which has been applied to this body of water in later years. But, as a matter of fact, two terms have a common origin. Unlike the "Beautiful Blue Danube," which is really a dirty yellowish brown, the Red Sea is really red—the color being due to the prevalence of a minute bright red plant, a kind of seaweed. This plant is said to be so small that 25,000,000 can live and thrive within a single cubic inch of water. Therefore, instead of being mottled with red, the sea appears in many cases to be of a scarlet shade. A red dye, which tradition says was used hundreds of years ago, is made from this weed, but, in the places where it is not found, the waters of the Red Sea are as blue or green as those of any other body of water.

St. Paul's Dummy Dome.

It is not generally known that the towering dome of St. Paul's Cathedral is a dummy.

It is built of wood and covered with lead, but is not strong enough to support the lantern and gold ball that appear to rest upon it.

Sixty feet below it is another and quite separate dome. This is built of bricks, and is the dome seen from the interior. Between these two, hidden from sight, is a brick cone, 18 inches in thickness and reinforced with iron tie-rods.

The lantern and ball, which weigh 700 tons, are supported by this cone. The total weight of the whole structure (64,000 tons) is carried on eight central piers. Hence the necessity of making sure that these piers rest on sure foundations.

Air In Layers.

Explorations of the air have revealed an astonishing definiteness of arrangement in its layers, although, of course, the details are continually changing. Ley, in England, has directed his studies of floating balloons to a solution of the question of the influence of the topography of the earth's surface on the state of the air above it. He finds, among other things, that the disturbances produced by hills and valleys are transmitted to an unexpectedly great elevation, affecting the lower and middle strata throughout. A general effect noticed is that the velocity of the wind, or of a current of air, is increased over a hill and diminished over a valley. It is thought that similar observations, generally distributed, would furnish us with a real topography of the air.—Christian Science Monitor.

Rain Gambling.

Rain gambling is common among the natives of India. The "bookmakers" offer odds against the rain, the public backing the rain. The odds vary with the state of the weather from 2 to 1 to 50 to 1. Those who back the rain win when the fall causes an overflow from a small tank.

An Old Clock.

The oldest English-made clock known is in the tower of the palace at Hampton Court, where it was placed in 1551. It was so complete it showed the motions of several of the planets, in addition to measuring the time. Part of the original mechanism is still in place.

Judgment Reserved.

After hearing argument of counsel as the case of Hall vs. Green was concluded before Judge Deroche, his Honor reserved judgment. The case arose over the sale of defendant's lands under a tax sale by the town of Deseronto, the plaintiff, Hall, being the purchaser. When Hall made a demand for possession, the defendant, Green, refused to go out and set up the defense that he was the owner of the lands as part of the Indian reservation, and had acquired the same from another Indian, and produced a quit claim deed, signed by the Rathbun company, upon which there was an endorsement by the chiefs, certifying that Green was the locatee. Green claimed title under this grant and not under the quit claim deed. The town of Deseronto was incorporated as a town in 1889, and at that time these lands, along with others, were not surrendered by the Mohawk chiefs or the band, and the defendant contended that the land being then Indian lands, the town of Deseronto had no authority nor had the provincial legislature any authority to deal with the lands or incorporate them in the town of Deseronto without consent of the Indians and the approval of the government of Canada, and that the proclamation erecting Deseronto into a town was invalid in so far as it attempted to annex any part of the reserve.

CAMDEN EAST

Samuel Brian spent a few days in Ottawa last week.

Rev. Mr. Spencer and Mrs. Spencer, Gananoque, were visitors of Miss L. Martin and other friends recently.

The Rural School Fair, which was held in this place on Friday, September 23rd, was a grand success. Four schools paraded and the first prize was awarded to the Bicknell's Corner school. Much credit is due their teacher, Mrs. Fairbairn, for the time she spent in training them. Prizes were given for the best boy and girl drivers. Cecil Simmons received the prize for the boys, and for the girls Marion Simmons received first prize, and Letitia Warner the second prize. A number of races were run. The exhibits were placed in a tent, and there was quite a variety of things, and made the judges think to know which was the best. Outside the tent there was a fine display of poultry, also three calves and a lamb. The W.C.T.U. ladies served lunch to all who desired it in the hall of the school house. What pleased the children more than anything else was when the manager announced that he was ready to give out the prize money.

All were pleased to have at the fair Henry Purcell, Colebrook, who was born in this village eighty-two years ago. A great many changes since those times, he says. He was born in the house opposite the Parish hall, now owned by Geo. Babcock. This place was known as Clark's Mills then. Mr. Purcell enjoyed the fair immensely, and hope he will live to enjoy many more. He has a number of old relics and can tell a good many stories.

Mrs. J. S. Galbraith, of Vernon, B. C., visited in the village and attended the school fair where she met a large number of her old friends.

Miss Marion Riley, of Ottawa, spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Riley.

Rally Day services were observed in the Methodist church on Sunday, Sept. 25th, and were well attended.

James Bayne is sporting a car.

A. Dickson is on the sick list.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert. Amey, of Desmond, visited Mr. and Mrs. W. Sprott recently.

Mrs. McTavish, of Winnipeg, spent a few days with her friend, Mrs. L. H. Slover.

Mrs. Ellen Lucas and Ruby returned home after spending the past two months at Damon Amey's, Wilton.

A send-off was given to Mr. and Mrs. Thompson on Monday evening, Sept. 26th, in the Parish hall. They were presented with a silverer tea service by Miss Lillian Robinson and Miss Helen Dickinson, who, on behalf of the high esteem in which they were held in the community, although they were only here a couple of years. A splendid programme was given by home talent. Mr. Thompson thanked the people in a few well chosen words. Mr. Thompson left on Tuesday for Toronto.

Thrift Farms.

Farmers who are retiring to the towns these days are in many cases making themselves safe by reserving a limited acreage of their farms frequently a portion of the wood-lot in addition to a strip of cleared land big enough to grow a good supply of vegetables.

Ten Degrees Difference.

Careful studies by some of the experiment station men and practical farmers have shown that there may be at least ten degrees difference in temperature between well-drained and water-logged places in the same field.

WANT BRITISH PREMIER.

Harding Urges Lloyd George to Visit Washington.

LONDON, Oct. 3. — President Harding has made a direct personal appeal to Premier Lloyd George to attend the disarmament conference at Washington, according to the usually well-informed Sunday Chronicle.

When and how the invitation was made is not revealed, but it is considered likely here that this is the basis for the reported anxiety of the Premier to go, even if only for a fortnight.

But the Premier has been so busy with the Irish and the unemployment questions during his holidays at Gairloch that he has not found an opporunity to discuss the Washington conclave, intending to call a special session of the Cabinet for this purpose immediately after returning to London.

Diplomatic circles are discussing the Japanese attitude toward the conference. Japan will not consent to any changes in the policy, in Korea, Manchuria and Shantung, and it is feared that without some changes in these regions the policy of open door, favored by the United States cannot be rendered effective. At the same time Japan demands equality of treatment for her emigrants everywhere in the world.

ARMS FOR IRELAND.

Plot Has Been Exposed In the United States.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The second arrest in one week in connection with the seizure of 495 police riot guns on the steamship East Side, in Hoboken, June 15, was made Saturday when agents of the Department of Justice "found" John J. O'Brien, a carpenter, in the employ of the Interborough Rapid Transit Co. As in the case of George Gordon Rorke, who was taken into custody last Monday, the charge preferred by Assistant U. S. District Attorney M. S. Mattuck, under instructions from the Attorney-General, is conspiracy to set on foot a military expedition directed against the King of England by furnishing arms and instruction in their use to his Majesty's subjects in Ireland.

At least two other warrants are known to have been issued, and Mr. Mattuck declared that enough evidence now has been collected to make a conspiracy within the next two weeks more than likely. Much of this information was obtained when secret service men with a search warrant went through the books and correspondence of the Auto Ordnance Corporation, 501 Fifth avenue, from which, it is alleged, the guns found on the East Side were purchased.

O'Brien admitted, according to the federal prosecutor, that he had been present at the purchase of 50 machine guns from the Auto Ordnance Co. by other parties to the alleged conspiracy, and that subsequently he had been present when the guns were tested in one of the New York armories. He denied knowing George Gordon Rorke, and declared that personal friendship for one of the men who bought the 50 guns was the only reason for his presence at the sale.

It was learned from his statement that while residing at 101 West 101st street he was a member of the Sons of Irish Freedom. He moved to the Bronx three weeks ago.

O'Brien was arraigned before Commissioner S. M. Hitchcock and sent to the Tombs in default of $3,000 bail to await a hearing on October 10, the day on which Rorke is to be brought before the commissioner again.

BURNED UNDER AUTO.

Well-Known Oakville Man Meets Terrible Death.

OAKVILLE, Oct. 3. — Pinned under a burning car in a ditch on the Hamilton-Toronto Highway, John L. Forster, an Oakville man, met a horrible death Sunday evening. The accident ocurred about two miles west of the village of Bronte, while Forster and three friends, Thomas Lyons, George Robinson and A. T. Wilson, of Oakville, were driving home. The rain had made the pavement slippery and a skid sent the car off the road and into the ditch, where it overturned. The other men were thrown clear, but Forster was caught under the seat. The smash broke open the gasoline tank, spraying the contents over the car. It ignited almost immediately and in a moment the wreck was aflame. Other cars drove up, but none of them carried a rope, and the fire was burning so fiercely that it was impossible for the rescuers to lift the mass from the doomed man. The fifth car along produced a rope, which willing hands fastened to a wheel. It was a simple matter then to release Forster, but it was too late. The unfortunate man had been terribly burned and was dead when lifted out.

Chief Henry, of the Highway Police, who came to the spot shortly after the tragedy occurred, had the body removed to Oakville. Coroner Dr. Steed, of Oakville, after an inquiry, decided that an inquest was unnecessary.

Mr. Forster was a well-known painter and contractor in Oakville, and a highly respected resident. He was a member of the Independent Order of Oddfellows and leaves a wife and three children. He was about 42 years of age.

Would the King Kiss His Hand?

At a dinner party the other evening, Premier Hughes of Australia told the guests how, when he was to be presented at court, he was carefully coached by his friend, Bonar Law; being instructed as to the manner in which he was to approach his majesty, kiss the royal hand, and so forth. Owing to Mr. Hughes' deafness, Bonar was a little anxious as the time for the presentation drew near, fearing that his instructions might have been imperfectly comprehended. "Are you feeling nervous?" he inquired, as he stood at "Billy's" elbow. "Not a bit of it," was the answer; "but I'm hanged if I like the idea of the King having to kiss my hand." B. L. gasped, but as the moment had arrived for the Prime Minister to go forward, there was no time for fresh explanations. However, everything went well; "Billy" had quite understood his instructions, and had merely been "pulling the leg" of B. L. But the latter afterwards confessed that he experienced several anxious moments ere the ceremony was completed.

VOTING IN DECEMBER

Elections Take Place First Week in December.

Premier Meighen States That Exact Date Will Be Known In a Day or Two, When All Electorial Officers Are Appointed—Another French-Canadian Minister Has Entered the Cabinet.

OTTAWA, Oct. 3.—Hon. Arthur Meighen announced Saturday that he had recommended an immediate dissolution of Parliament to His Excellency, who is visiting in Toronto, and expected that his recommendation would be given effect at once. At the same time he stated that the writs would shortly be issued for an election during the first week in December, the definite date being made known as soon as all the electoral officers were appointed. Several appointments were made Saturday and await the approbation of His Excellency. Andre Fauteaux, K.C., who addressed the large gathering in the Monument National Friday evening, accompanied the Prime Minister from Montreal, and will be named Solicitor-General. He would have been sworn in Saturday if the Governor-General had been in the city. Mr. Fauteaux will contest either Terrebonne or Laval—Two Mountains. He has been active in political life for several years. It is also possible that another French-Canadian will enter the Cabinet without portfolio. Reports here credit Hon. Rodolphe Monty with an inclination to test his fortunes in Beauharnois in the coming election. This has always been good fighting ground and was represented for twenty-one years by the late Hon. J. E. H. Bergeron. L. J. Papineau, who has represented this constituency for thirteen years, was elected in 1908 by 29, in 1911 by 27 and in 1917 by acclamation.

It is understood that at the Cabinet meeting convened on short notice Saturday afternoon Mr. Forteaux was appointed Solicitor-General. This could be done without the presence of the Governor-General, who can make it effective simply by signing the order-in-council. Premier Meighen was Solicitor-General for more than a year before he was given Cabinet rank, and Hon. Hugh Guthrie served in the same capacity for a time before being sworn in as Privy Councillor. It is therefore a signal honor for Mr. Fauteux. Mr. Fauteaux has twice contested Two Mountains in the Conservative interest against the Liberal candidate, Mr. J. A. C. Ethier, who was expected to retire to take a judicial position.

The date of the election is expected to be Wednesday, December 7. Premier Meighen said that it would be in the first week of December. It is believed that the fiat went forth at first to the faithful that December 8th would be the day, and caused many such arrangements to be made as those of the Newmarket Tories, who leased the Town Hall for November 24 and December 8, the then expected nomination day and election day, respectively. It was then ascertained that December 8 was a religious holiday in Quebec (Conception Day).

The writs will not be issued at once, however. All the returning officers are not yet appointed, and it is necessary to have them all named in order to send writs for every constituency at once.

Two Senators were appointed on Saturday, it is understood, one for British Columbia and the other for Ontario. It is likely that Mr. R. F. Green, member for Kootenay, will be the new Senator for British Columbia, leaving another to be allocated either to Col. Cy. Peck, or Mr. Herb. Clements. The one remaining Ontario vacancy is likely to go to Hon. T. W. Crothers, member for St. Thomas, and ex-Minister of Labor.

Death or Islam.

CALICUT, India, Oct. 3.—The situation in the Melattur is becoming very serious. The rebels are offering Hindus the alternative of death or Islam. If the Indians hesitate to choose they are ordered to dig their graves. If they refuse to embrace Islam they are then shot and dropped into their graves.

Complete home rule has been declared. Crops belonging to the Hindus have been confiscated. The Hindus as fleeing.

Former King Dead.

STUTTGART, Germany, Oct. 3.—Former King William II. of Wurttemburg is dead.

King William had suffered from a severe form of bronchitis, and his death was due to that and heart complications.

William II., reigning king of the monarchy of Wurttemburg, abdicated in November, 1918. He issued a proclamation, saying that his person would never serve to hinder the development of the wishes of the people. His abdication, along with that of many other German rulers, was a direct outcome of the war. He had reigned since 1891.

Dies at Parents' Graves.

PETERBORO, Oct. 3.—Miss Margaret Breckenridge was found dead Saturday in Peterboro cemetery, her hand clasping a bouquet of roses which she had evidently intended to lay on the grave of her parents. Heart failure is believed to have been the cause of death. She was about fifty years of age.

Proceeds of Fur Auction.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. —The International Fur Exchange closed its auction here Friday night by crowding an extra session into the buying program. The total proceeds of the sale were approximated at $2,850,000, or an increase of $500,000 over the appraised value of the furs last February. An average gain of all furs was approximated at 30 per cent.

Hive and Honey Stolen.

COBOURG, Oct. 33.—Petty thieving in this district has taken a new turn. A Baltimore apiarist had two beehives, bees, honey and all, taken bodily away from his premises, while another in the same locality reports the loss of seventy-five pounds of fine honey stolen from two hives.

SOLD FRORIDA WATER

Now Charged With a Breach of the O.T.A.

Man In Sudbury Receives 193 Cases of "the Goods" In Four Months, and His Trial Will Be a Test Case —Chief Says 75 Per Cent. of Drunkards Use Toilet Preparations.

SUDBURY, Oct. 3.—A case of unusual interest and one of the first of its kind in the province, got under way in the Police Court here on Saturday, when the charge was read against J. B. Trudeau of selling Florida water, in contravention of the O. T. A. The particular brand of this lotion sold by Trudeau was reported by the provincial chemist to the local liquir license inspector as 20 per cent. over-proof alcohol. The police claim that a land office business is being done in this trade in Sudbury, and Acting Chief of Police O'Connell, giving evidence in the case, made the astounding statement that over 75 per cent. of the cases of intoxication handled by the force are due to the drinking of Florida water.

The charge was laid after Liquor seized a consignment of 32 cases of Florida water addressed to Trudeau, who, according to the testimony of the C. P. R. freight clerk, received from Montreal during the months of May to August, 1921, 193 cases of the toilet preparation. Other crown witnesses, mostly police or liquor department officers, classed Trudeau as doing a big business in Florida water, which, to their knowledge, was being used almost entirely for drinking purposes. Acting Chief O'Connell was of the opinion that this particular brand contained more alcohol than some others, and, further stated that local drug stores in Sudbury did not handle it, although he could not say that drug stores elsewhere did not stock it.

Questioned by counsel for the defence, J. E. Bedard, as to whether the Florida water found on intoxicated prisoners by him (Chief O'Connell) was not being used for its intended purpose, the latter explained that he thought it highly improbable that a man who was almost broke would be extravagant enough to spend a dollar and a quarter for a lotion when he could obtain other preparations at a much lower price.

The case is the occasion of much interest in town, and all members of the legal profession are following it closely, as, when a similar charge was preferred against the accused and a few others same time ago, it was dropped after much deliberation. Different opinions are being expressed by those in a position to make comment on the question. Some contend that the manufacturers of the lotion are in possession of a Government charter to manufacture it, and when it is sold openly the action is entirely foreign to the O. T. A.

The crown evidence has been heard by Magistrate Brodie and the defence argument will be heard today.

Sufficient for Inquiry.

TORONTO, Oct. 3.—According to Commissioner W. S. Dingman of the Ontario License Board, the sale of a bottle of Florida water in itself does not constitute a breach of the O. T. A., but the sale of such in the face of certain suspicious or obvious circumstances does. According to the commissioner's illustration, where a man is sold bottle after bottle of the fluid, probably one a day, there are sufficient grounds upon which to base the suspicion that it is required for beverage purposes, and, consequently, grounds for inquiry, and, possibly, prosecution. Commissioner Dingman, while not recalling any previous prosecution of this particular kind, is of the opinion that there have been some.

When the circumstances of the seizure of the 32-case shipment was read to Mr. Dingman he expressed the opinion that that in itself constituted sufficient grounds for at least an inquiry.

Ship Was In Trouble.

QUEBEC, Oct. 3.—Fears are entertained in shipping circles here for the Norwegian steamer Karen Rogenes, which was reported aground off Pointe Ferolle, in the Straits of Belle Isle, Saturday morning, but has not been heard from since that time.

The steamer Orthia, inward bound, on Saturday went to assist the Karen Rogenes, but when she reached Pointe Ferolle, on Saturday evening, there was no sight of the Karen Rogenes, and whether the vessel got off herself and continued her voyage or whether she sank could not be ascertained up to a late hour. The Karen Rogenes cleared from Montreal on September 27.

Farmer Hangs Himself.

MILVERTON, Oct. 3. — William Kreuter, a young farmer residing at Rostick in Ellice township, seven miles from here, committed suicide Saturday morning by hanging himself to a tree in a willow patch on his farm. He was not responsible for the act, as he had been mentally unbalanced for several months, and had made a previous attempt on his life by taking Paris green. He is survived by his wife and five small children.

Anti-British Revolt Simmers.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—A situation of the utmost gravity is developing in India, says a despatch to the Daily Herald, the Labor organ, in consequence of the declaration of Mahatma Gandhi, the Nationalist leader.

"We must repeat the formulae of the Ali brothers and invite imprisonment; we must declare from thousands of platforms that it is sinful for any Mussulman or Hindu to serve the existing Government, whether as a soldier or in any capacity whatsoever."

In response to this, says the Herald, meetings are being held throughout India. Ten thousand persons attending a demonstration at Cawnpore repeated, after it had been introduced by Hasrat Mohani, the chairman's wife, a resolution affirming that it was unlawful for Mussulmans to remain in the British army.

Value of a Stolen Kiss.

PARIS, Oct. 3.—The pecuniary value of a kiss is agitating the Paris courts. The excitement follows the complaint of Madame Vera Ostenski that she was forcibly kissed by Ebenezer Whitfield, a wealthy Englishman, when with him in a railway compartment.

Madame Vera demanded $5,000. Whitfield refused to pay, declaring that he would rather go to jail. The court compromised by sentencing him to a month in jail or $10 fine.

David Bispham Is Dead.

NEW YORK, Oct 3.—David Scull Bispham, baritone and one of the best known American lyric artists, died of intestinal trouble Sunday after an illness of six weeks. He was 64 years old. A wife and two daughters survive him.

He was one o fthe founders of the Society of American Singers, producing classic opera comique in English.

Free Hunting Privileges.

WASHAGO, Oct. 3.—Chief Bigwin of Washago has been successful in securing free hunting privileges for Indians in the counties of Haliburton, Victoria, Ontario, Simcoe and district of Muskoka. Heretofore the Indian have found restrictions onerous. Love Insurance

By Earl Derr Biggers

Copyright, 1914, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

"Call me Mears," said the bearded one. "I'm managing editor of the Mail, and this is my city editor, Mr. Elliott."

"Delighted!" breathed O'Neill. "A pleasant little haven you have found here. And your staff? I don't see the members of your staff running in and out."

"Mr. O'Neill," said Mears impressively, "you have drunk with the staff of the Mail."

"You two?" O'Neill's face shone with joy. "Glory be—do you hear that, Harry? These gentlemen all alone on the premises!" He leaned over and poured out eloquently the story of the tragic flight from Mobile. "I call this luck," he finished. "Here we are, broke, eager for work, and we find you minus a"—

O'Neill stopped, for he had seen a sickly smile of derision float across the face of the weary city editor, and he saw the bearded man shaking his great head violently.

"Nothing doing," said the bearded man firmly. "Sorry to dash your hopes. Always ready to pour another drink, but there are no vacancies here. No, sir; two of us are plenty and running over, eh, Bill?"

"Plenty and running over," agreed the city editor warmly.

Into their boots tumbled the hearts of the two strangers in a strange land. Gloom and hunger engulfed them. But the managing editor of the Mail was continuing, and what was this he was saying?

"No, boys, we don't need a staff. Have just as much use for a manicure set. But you come at an opportune time. Wanderlust—it tickles the soles of four feet tonight, and those four feet are editorial feet on the Mail. Something tells us that we are going away from here. Boys, how would you like our jobs?"

He stared placidly at the two strangers. O'Neill put one hand to his head.

"See me safely to my park bench, Harry," he said. "It was that drink on an empty stomach. I'm all in a daze. I hear strange things."

"I hear 'em, too," said Howe. "See here"—he turned to Mears—"are you offering to resign in our favor?"

"The minute you say the word."

"Both of you?"

"Believe me," said the city editor, "you can't say the word too soon."

"Well," said Howe, "I don't know what's the matter with the place, but you can consider the deal closed."

"Spoken like a sport!" The bearded man stood up. "You can draw lots to determine who is to be managing editor and who city editor. It's an excellent scheme. I attained my proud position that way. One condition I attach. Ask no questions. Let us go out into the night unburdened with your interrogation points."

Elliott, too, stood. The bearded man indicated the bottle. "Fill up, boys. I propose a toast. To the new editors of the Mail. May heaven bless them and bring them safely back to the north when Florida's first fever is past."

Dizzily, uncertainly, Howe and O'Neill drank. Mr. Mears reached out a great red hand toward the bottle.

"Pardon me—private property," he said. He pocketed it. "We bid you goodby and good luck. Think of us on the choochoo, please. Riding far—riding far."

"But—see here"—cried O'Neill.

"But me no buts," said Mears again. "Nary a question, I beg of you. Take our jobs, and if you think of us at all think of gleaming rails and a speeding train. Once more—goodby."

The door slammed. O'Neill looked at Howe.

"Fairies," he muttered, "or the D. T.'s. What is this—a comic opera or a town? You are managing editor, Harry. I shall be city editor. Is there a city to edit? No matter."

"No," said Howe. He reached for the greasy pack of cards. "We draw for it. Come on. Rich wins."

"Jack," announced Mr. O'Neill.

"Deuce," smiled Howe. "What are your orders, sir?"

O'Neill passed one hand before his eyes.

"A steak," he muttered. "Well done. Mushroom sauce. French fried potatoes. I've always dreamed of running a paper some day. Hurry up with that steak."

"Forget your stomach," said Howe. "If a subordinate may make a suggestion, we must get out a newspaper. Ah, whom have we here?"

A stout, red faced man appeared from the inner room and stood regarding them.

"Where's Mears and Elliott?" he demanded.

"On a train, riding far," said O'Neill. "I am the new managing editor. What can I do for you?"

"You can give me four columns of copy for the last page of tomorrow's Mail," said the stranger calmly. "I'm foreman of something in there we call a composing room. Glad to meet you."

"Four columns," mused O'Neill. "Four columns of what?"

The foreman pointed to a row of battered books on a shelf.

"It's been the custom," he said, "to fill up with stuff out of that encyclopedia there."

"Thanks," O'Neill answered. He took down a book. "We'll fix you up in ten minutes. Mr. Howe, will you please do me two columns on—er—mullagatawny—murder—mushrooms. That's it. On mushrooms. The life story of the humble little mushroom. I myself will dash off a column or so on the climate of Algeria."

They looked up suddenly ten minutes later to find a man standing between them. He was a little man, clad all in white, suit, shoes, stockings. His sly old face was a lemon yellow, and his eyes suggested lights flaming in the dark woods at night.

"Beg pardon," said the little man.

"Ah, and what can we do for you?" inquired O'Neill.

"Nothing. Mr. Mears? Mr. Elliott?"

"The real Lord Harrowby has been kidnaped."

"Gone. Vamosed. You are now speaking to the managing editor of the Mail."

"Ah! Indeed?"

"We are very busy. If you'll just tell me what you want"—

"I merely dropped in. I am Manuel Gonzale, owner of the Mail."

"Good Lord!" cried O'Neill.

"Do not be disturbed. I take it you gentlemen have replaced Mears and Elliott. I am glad. Let them go. You look like bright young men to me—quite bright enough. I employ you."

"Thanks," stammered the managing editor.

"Don't mention it. Here is Mme. On Dit's column for tomorrow. It runs on the first page. As for the rest of the paper, suit yourselves."

O'Neill took the copy and glanced through it.

"Are there no libel laws down here?" he asked

"The material in that column," said the little man, his eyes narrowing, "concerns only me. You must understand that at once."

"The madame writes hot stuff," ventured O'Neill.

"I am the madame," said the owner of the Mail with dignity.

He removed the copy from O'Neill's hand and glided with it into the other room. Scarcely had he disappeared when the door was opened furiously and a panting man stood inside. Mr. Henry Trimmer's keen eye surveyed the scene.

"Where's Mears—Elliott?" he cried.

"You're not the cashier, are you?" asked O'Neill with interest.

"Don't try to be funny," roared Trimmer. "I'm looking for the editor of this paper."

"Your search is ended," O'Neill replied. "What is it?"

"You mean you— Say! I've got a front page story for tomorrow's issue that will upset the town."

"Come to my arms," cried O'Neill. "What is it?"

"The real Lord Harrowby has been kidnaped."

O'Neill stared at him sorrowfully.

"Have you been reading the Duchess again?" he asked. "Who is Lord Harrowby?"

"Do you mean to say you don't know? Where have you been buried, alive?"

Out of the inner room gilded Manuel Gonzale, and, recognizing him, Mr. Trimmer poured into his ear the story of George's disappearance. Mr. Gonzale rubbed his hands.

"A good story," he said. "A very good story. Thank you, a thousand times. I myself will write it."

With a scornful glance at the two strangers, Mr. Trimmer went out, and Manuel Gonzale sat down at his desk O'Neill and Howe returned to their encyclopedic dispatches.

"There you are," said Gonzale at last, standing. "Put an eight column head on that, please, and run it on the front page. A very fine story. The paper must go to press"—he looked at his watch—"in an hour. Only four pages. Please see to the makeup. My circulation manager will assist you with the distribution." At the door he paused. "It occurs to me that your exchequer may be low. Seventy-five dollars a week for the managing editor. Fifty for the city editor. Allow me—$10 each, in advance. If you need more pray remind me."

Into their hands he put crinkling bills. And then, gilding still like the fox he looked, he went out into the night.

"Sister," cried O'Neill weakly, "the fairies are abroad tonight. I hear the rustle of their feet over the grass."

Friday morning found Mr. Minot ready for whatever diplomacy the day might demand of him. He had a feeling that the demand would be great. The unheralded arrival of Miss Gabrielle Rose and her packet of letters presented no slight complication. What ever the outcome of any suit she might start against Harrowby, Minot was sure that the mere announcement of it would be sufficient to blast Jephson's hopes for all time. Old Spencer Meyrick, already inflamed by the episode of the elder brother, was not likely to take coolly the publication of Harrowby's incriminating letters.

After an early breakfast Minot sent a cable to Jephson telling of Miss Rose's arrival and asking for information about her.

Lunch time came—2 o'clock. At 2:30, out of London, Jephson spoke. Said his cable:

Know nothing of G. R. except that she's been married frequently. Do best you can.

And what help was this, pray? Disgustedly Minot read the cable again. Four o'clock the respite he had asked from the Gaiety lady was coming on space, and with every tick of the clock his feeling of helplessness grew. He mentally berated Thacker and Jephson. They left him alone to grapple with wild problems, offering no help and asking miracles. Confound them both!

Three o'clock came. What—what was he to say? Lord Harrowby, interrogated, was merely useless and frantic. He couldn't raise a shilling. He couldn't offer a suggestion. "Dear old chap," he moaned, "I depend on you."

Three-thirty! Well, Thacker and Jephson had asked the impossible, that was all. Minot felt he had done his best. No man could do more. He was very sorry for Jephson, but—golden before him opened the possibility of Miss Cynthia Meyrick free to be wooed. Yet he must be faithful to the last. At a quarter to four he read Jephson's cablegram again. As he read, a plan ridiculous in its ineffectiveness occurred to him. And since no other came in the interval before he walked into Miss Rose's presence determined to try out his weak little bluff.

CHAPTER X.

Tears From the Gaiety.

THE Gaiety lady was playing on the piano—a whispering, seductive little tune. As Minot stepped to her side she glanced up at him with a coy twitting smile. But she drew back a little at his determined glare.

"Miss Rose," he said sharply, "I have discovered that you can not sue Lord Harrowby for breach of contract to marry you."

"Why—why not?" she stammered.

"Because," said Minot, with a triumphant smile, though it was a shot in the dark, "you already had a husband when those letters were written to you."

Well, he had done his best. A rather childish effort, but what else was there to attempt? Poor old Jephson!

"Nonsense," said the Gaiety lady, and continued to play.

"Nothing of the sort," Minot replied. "Why, I can produce the man myself."

Might as well go the limit while he was about it. That should be his consolation when Jephson lost. Might as well—but what was this?

Gabrielle Rose had turned livid with anger. Her lips twitched, her china blue eyes flashed fire. If only her lawyer had been by her side then! But he wasn't. And so she cried hotly:

"He's told! The little brute's told!"

Good Lord! Minot felt his knees weaken. A shot in the dark had hit the target after all?

"If you refer to your husband," said Minot, "he has done just that."

"He's not my husband," she snapped. Oh, what was the use? Providence was with Jephson.

"No, of course not—not since the divorce," Minot answered. "But he was when those letters were written."

The Gaiety lady's chin began to tremble.

"And he promised me, on his word of honor, that he wouldn't tell. But I suppose you found him easy. What honor could one expect in a Persian carpet dealer?"

A Persian carpet dealer? Into Minot's mind floated a scrap of conversation heard at Mrs. Bruce's table.

"But you must remember," he ventured, "that he also is a prince."

"Yes," said the woman, "that's what I thought when I married him. He's the prince of liars; that's as far as his royal blood goes."

A silence while Miss Gabrielle Rose felt in her sleeve for her handkerchief.

"I suppose," Minot suggested, "you will abandon the suit"—

She looked at him. Oh, the pathos of that baby stare!

"You are acting in this matter simply as Harrowby's friend?" she asked.

"Simply as his friend."

"And—so far—only you know of my—er—ex-husband?"

"Only I know of him," smiled Minot. The smile died from his face. For he saw bright tears on the long lashes of the Gaiety lady. She leaned close.

"Mr. Minot," she said, "it is I who need a friend. Not Harrowby. I am here in a strange country, without funds, alone, helpless. Mr. Minot, you could not be so cruel."

"I—I'm sorry," said Minot uncomfortably.

The lady was an actress, and she acted now, beautifully.

"I—I feel so desolate," she moaned, dashing daintily at her eyes. "You will help me. It cannot be I am mistaken in you. I thought—did I imagine it—this morning when I sang for you—you liked me—just a little?"

Nervously Minot rose from his chair and stood looking down at her. He tried to answer, but his voice seemed lost.

"Just a very little?" She, too, rose and pinned the butterfly hands on his shoulder. "You do like me—just a little, don't you?"

Her pleading eyes gazed into his. It was a touching scene. To be besought thus tenderly by a famous beauty in the secluded parlor of a southern hotel! The touch of her hands on his shoulders thrilled him. The odor of Jockey Club—

It was at this instant that Mr. Minot, looking past the Gaiety lady's beautiful golden coiffure, beheld Miss Cynthia Meyrick standing in the doorway of that parlor, a smile on her face. She disappeared on the instant, but Gabrielle Rose's "big scene" was ruined beyond repair.

"My dear lady"—gently Minot slipped from beneath her lovely hands—"I assure you I do like you—more than a little. But unfortunately my loyalty to Harrowby—no, I won't say that—circumstances are such that I cannot be your friend in this instance. Though if I could serve you in any other way"—

Gabrielle Rose snapped her fingers.

"Very well." Her voice had a metallic ring now. "We shall see what we shall see."

"Undoubtedly. I bid you good day."

As Minot, somewhat dazed, walked along the veranda of the De la Paz he met Miss Meyrick. There was a mischievous gleam in her eye.

"Really, it was so tactless of me, Mr. Minot," she said. "A thousand apologies."

He pretended not to understand.

"My untimely descent on the parlor." She beamed on him. "I presume it happened because romance draws me—like a magnet. Even other people's."

Minot smiled wanly, and for once sought to end their talk.

"Oh, do sit down just a moment," she pleaded. "I want to thank you for the great service you did Harrowby and me—last night."

"Wha-what service?" asked Minot, sinking into a chair.

She leaned close and spoke in a whisper.

"Your part in the kidnaping. Harrowby has told me. It was sweet of you, so unselfish."

"Fierce!" thought Minot. And then he thought two more.

"To put yourself out that our wedding may be a success!" Was this sarcasm, Minot wondered. "I'm so glad to know about it, Mr. Minot. It shows me at last—just what you think is"—she looked away—"best for me."

"Best for you? What do you mean?"

"Can't you understand? From some things you've said I have thought—perhaps—you didn't just approve of my—marriage. And now I see I misconstrued you—utterly. You want me to marry Harrowby. You're working for it. I shouldn't be surprised if you were on that train last Monday just to make sure—I'd—get here—safely."

"Really, it was inhuman. Did she realize how inhuman it was? One glance at Minot might have told her. But she was still looking away.

"So I want to thank you, Mr. Minot," she went on, "I shall always remember your—kindness. I couldn't understand at first, but now—I wonder? You know, it's an old theory that as soon as one has one's own affair of the heart arranged one begins to plan for others?"

Minot made a little whistling sound through his clenched teeth. The girl stood up.

"Your thoughtfulness has made me very happy," she laughed. "It shows that perhaps you care for me—just a little—too."

She was gone! Minot sat swearing softly to himself, banging the arm of his chair with his fist. He raged at Thacker, Jephson, the solar system. Gradually his anger cooled. Underneath the raillery in Cynthia Meyrick's tone he had thought he detected something of a serious note, as though she were a little wistful, a little hurt.

Did she care? Bitter-sweet thought! In the midst of all this farce and melodrama had she come to care just a little?

Just a little! Bah!

Minot rose and went out on the avenue.

Prince Nevin Bey Imno was accustomed to give lectures twice daily on the textures of his precious rugs at his shop in the Alameda courtyard. His afternoon lecture was just finished as Mr. Minot stepped into the shop. A dozen awed housewives from the middle west were hurrying away to write home on the hotel stationery that they had met a prince. When the last one had gone out Minot stepped forward.

"Prince, I've dropped in to warn you. A very angry woman will be here shortly to see you."

The handsome young Persian shrugged his shoulders and took off the jacket of the native uniform with which he embellished his talks.

"Why is she angry? All my rugs—they are what I say they are. In this town are many liars selling oriental rugs. Oriental! Ugh! In New Jersey they were made. But not my rugs. See! Only in my native country, where I was a prince of the blood"—

"Yes, yes. But this lady is not coming about rugs. I refer to your ex-wife."

"Ah! You are mistaken. I have never married."

"Oh, yes, you have. I know all about it. There's no need to lie. The whole story is out and the lady's game in San Marco is covered. She thinks you told. That's why she'll be here for a chat."

"But I did not tell. Only this morning did I see her first. I could not tell —so soon. Who could I tell—so soon?"

"I know you didn't tell. But can you prove it to an agitated lady? No. You'd better close up for the evening."

"Ah, yes—you are right. I am innocent—but what avails innocence can for innocence? We are no longer married—still I should not want to meet her now. I will close. But first—my friend—my benefactor—could I interest you in this rug? See! Only in my native country, where"—

"Prince," said Minot, "I couldn't use a rug if you gave me one."

That is exactly what I would do. You are my friend. You serve me. I give you a rug. Fifty dollars. That is giving it to you. Note the weave. Only in my"—

"Good night," interrupted Minot. "And take my advice. Hurry!"

Gloomy, discouraged, he turned back toward his own hotel. It was true, Gabrielle Rose's husband at the time of the letters was in San Marco. The emissary of Jephson was serving a cause that could not lose. That afternoon he had hoped. Was there anything dishonorable in that? Jephson and Thacker could command his service, they could not command his heart. He had—good now.

At a corner a negro gave him a handbill. He read:

WHO HAS KIDNAPED THE REAL LORD HARROWBY?

AT THE OPERA HOUSE TONIGHT!

Mr. Henry Trimmer Will Appear In Place of His Unfortunate Friend, Lord Harrowby, and Will Make a Few WARM AND SIZZLING REMARKS.

NO ADVANCE IN PRICES.

Mr. Minot tossed the bill into the street. Into his eyes came the ghostlike semblance of a smile. After all, the famous Harrowby wedding had not yet taken place.

The next day the Gaiety girl left town. Her cheerful mood was explained when Lord Harcourt, in great distress, told Minot that she had sold her love letters to the owner of the Mail who threatened to publish them if he wasn't paid $10,000. Minot hunted up Jack Paddock and told him the whole story of his mission in San Marco. Together they went to the Mail office.

CHAPTER XI.

Hard Lines For Gonzale.

O'NEILL sat behind a desk, the encyclopedia before him, seeking lively topics for the morrow's issue. Mr. Howe hammered at a typewriter. Both of the newspaper men looked up at the intrusion.

"Ah, gentlemen," said O'Neill, coming forward. "What can I do for you?"

"Who are you?" Minot asked.

"What? Can it be? If my name not a household word in San Marco? I am managing editor of the Mail." His eyes lighted on Mr. Paddock's giddy attire. "We can't possibly let you give a ball here tonight, if that's what you want."

"Very humorous," said Minot. "But our wants are far different. I won't beat around the bush. You have some letters here written by a friend of mine to a lady he adored—at the moment. You are going to print them in tomorrow's Mail unless my friend is easy enough to pay you $10,000. He isn't going to pay you anything. We've come for those letters, and we'll get them or run you and your town out of town in twenty-four hours, you raw little blackmailers!"

"Blackmailers!" Mr. O'Neill's eyes seemed to catch fire from his hair. His face paled. "I've been in the newspaper business seventeen years, and nobody ever called m a blackmailer and got away with it. I'm in a generous mood. I'll give you one chance to take that back"—

"Nonsense. It happens to be true"—put in Paddock.

"I'm talking to your friend here." O'Neill's breath came fast. "I'll attend to you, you lily of the field, in a minute. You—you liar—are you going to take that back?"

"No!" cried Minot.

He saw a wild Irishman coming for him, breathing fire. He squared himself to meet the attack. But the man at the typewriter leaped up and seized O'Neill from behind.

"Steady, Bob!" he shouted. "How do you know this fellow isn't right?"

Unaccountably the warlike one collapsed into a chair.

"Hang it, I know he's right," he groaned. "That's what makes me rave. Why didn't you let me punch him? It would have been some satisfaction. Of course he's right. I had a hunch this was a blackmailing sheet from the moment my hot fingers closed on Gonzale's money. But so long as nobody told us, we were all right."

He glared angrily at Minot.

"You—you killjoy," he cried. "You skeleton at the feast. You've put us in a lovely fix."

"Well, I'm sorry," said Minot, "but I don't understand these heroics."

"Its all up now, Harry," moaned O'Neill. "The free trial is over and we've got to send the mattress back to the factory. Here in this hollow lotus land, ever to live and lie reclined—I was putting welcome on the mat for a fate like that. Back to the road for us. That human fish over in the Chronicle office was a prophet—'You look unlucky—maybe they'll give you jobs on the Mail,' Remember?"

"Cool off, Bob," Howe said. He turned to Minot and Paddock. "Of course you don't understand. You see, we're strangers here. Drifted in last night broke and hungry, looking for jobs. We got them—under rather unusual circumstances. Things looked suspicious—the proprietor parted with money without screaming for help, and no regular newspaper is run like that. But—when you're down and out, you know"—

"I understand," said Minot, smiling. "And I'm sorry I called you what I did. I apologize. And I hate to be a—er—a killjoy. But as a matter of fact, your employer is a blackmailer, and it's best you should know it."

"Yes," put in Paddock. "Do you gentlemen happen to have heard where the editor of Mr. Gonzale's late newspaper, published in Havana, is now?"

"We do not," said O'Neill, "but may be you'll tell us."

"I will. He's in prison doing ten years for blackmail. I understand that Mr. Gonzale prefers to involve his editors, rather than himself."

O'Neill came over and held out his hand to Minot.

"Shake, son," he said. "Thank God I didn't waste my strength on you. Gonzale will be in here in a minute."

"About those letters?" Howe inquired.

"Yes," said Minot. "They were written to a Gaiety actress by a man who is in San Marco for his wedding next Tuesday—Lord Harrowby."

"His ludship again," O'Neill remarked. "Say, I always thought the south was democratic."

"Well," said Howe, "we owe you fellows something for putting us wise. We've stood for a good deal, but never for blackmailing. As a matter of fact, Gonzale hasn't brought the letters in yet, but he's due at any minute. When he does, take the letters away from him. I shan't interfere. How about you, Bob?"

"I'll interfere," said O'Neill, "and I'll interfere strong, if I think you fellows are leaving enough of little Manuel for me to caress"—

The door opened, and the immaculate proprietor of the Mail came noiselessly into the room. His eyes narrowed when they fell on the strangers there.

"Are you Manuel Gonzale?" Minot demanded.

"I—am. The sly little eyes darted everywhere.

"Proprietor of the Mail?"

"Yes."

"The gentleman who visited Lord Harrowby an hour back?"

"Man, man! You're wasting time," O'Neill cried.

"Excuse me," smiled Minot. "Unintentional, I assure you." He seized the little Spaniard suddenly by the collar. "We're here for Lord Harrowby's letters," he said. His other hand began a rapid search of Manuel Gonzale's pockets.

"Let me go, you thief!" screamed the proprietor of the Mail. He squirmed and fought. "Let me go!" He writhed about to face his editors. "You fools! What are you doing, standing there? Help me—help!"—

"We're waiting," said O'Neill. "Waiting for our turn. Remember your promise, son. Enough of him left for me."

Minot and his captive slid back and forth across the floor. The three others watched. O'Neill in high glee.

"Go to it!" he cried. "That's Mme. On Dit you're waltzing with. I speak for the next dance, madame."

Mr. Minot's eager hand came away from the Spaniard's inner waistcoat pocket, and in it was a packet of perfumed letters, tied with a cute blue ribbon. He released his victim.

"Sorry to be so impolite," he said. "But I had to have these tonight."

Gonzale turned on him with an evil glare.

"Thief!" he cried. "I'll have the law on you for this."

"I doubt that," smiled Minot. "Jack, I guess that about concludes our business with the Mail." He turned to Howe and O'Neill. "You boys look me up at the De la Paz. I want to wish you bon voyage when you start north. For the present—goodby."

And he and Paddock departed.

To be continued.

STOMACH ULCER AND GALL STONES

After Suffering 25 Years, Completely Relieved by "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

MR. EDWARDS

MAPLEHURST FARM, HILLHURST, P.Q.

"I am in my 78th year. About 25 years ago, I began to have trouble with my Stomach. One doctor said I had Cancer; another said, Ulcer of the Stomach; another, Gall Stones; others, Ulcers of the Liver and Inflammation of the Gall Bladder.

Three years ago, I consulted one of the best specialists in Montreal. He said I must go to the hospital, have an Ulcer cut out of my stomach and gall stones removed. I was then 74 years old. I said "NO."

Then, I began to take "Fruit-a-tives". I found they helped me a lot, and I still take them occasionally, and I am so much better that my old friends often ask me what I have done to myself to look so well. I am gaining in weight and enjoying life very much"

Measuring an Acre.

An acre contains 43,560 square feet or 4,480 square yards. To lay out an acre with square corners, divide the units in the square contents by the units of the same kind in the length of the known side. Thus: If one side is to be ninety feet long, divide 43,560 by 90, and the quotient, 484 feet, will be the depth of an acre plot. If only rough measurements are required, all that is necessary is to pace off 70 paces each way, the product being close enough to the area of a square acre for rough purposes.

Mulch Is Not Appreciated.

Although mulching has long been recognized as an important factor in successful small fruit culture, the value of summer mulching in the vegetable garden is not yet appreciated by most home-acre gardeners, and it is not practiced by them as generally as it deserves to be.

Injurious to Crowd Swine.

Losses of hogs in the past have proven that it does not pay to try to crowd a few extra in the car. It would be far more economical to order an additional car, the freight rate being no larger than the loss that may be entailed by the overloading.

Sheep-breeding Waning.

Generally speaking, sheep-breeding is waning in popularity, but nevertheless the man who keeps a small flock of the "good type" will profit on the investment.

SAVE FREIGHTAGE AS ONE FORM OF ECONOMY.

Specialized Farming Has Been Carried to an Extreme In Recent Years, But Conditions Are Becoming Normal Again—Time Is Past for Buying Potatoes for the Grain Farm Table.

With the return to normal conditions, in farming among other industries, there will have to be a return to the one-time general practice of provisioning the farm house table with products of the home farm if the average farmer in this country is to make a success of his farming undertakings. For several years past the growing of special crops for direct marketing, or the production of milk or live stock as specialties, has been followed on many farms so persistently that making a living off the farm—in the truest sense—has become almost a lost art. The potato shortage of a year ago did something toward bringing farmers in Ontario to the realization of the fact that they had better make themselves individually independent as regards home table supplies, but there are yet many engaged in specialized farming who continue to look forward to securing supplies such as milk, fruit, vegetables, from others, who specialize in those lines.

One strong influence in favor of generalization in crop growing, at least to the extent of providing home supplies of every practical product from the home fields or garden, is the existing freight rates. Lower value of the various farm and garden products will also have a big influence. The former condition affects both producer and consumer, while the latter affects the producer more particularly. The market gardener, for instance, is not going to be willing to stand for freight or express rates at their present level being taken out of his returns for crops that a grain farmer requires in small quantities; nor is the grain grower, who is perfectly capable of growing the vegetables himself, going to be willing to share transportation charges with the market gardeners. With vegetables at lower prices than in some years past, the market gardener is not likely to go on growing spinach at a loss, and continue to buy milk, when his spinach ground might just as well be growing roots for his own cow. As a matter of fact, water makes up too great a proportion of common garden vegetables to allow of the producer disposing of them at a profit to farmer-consumers at any great distance. The same applies in a lesser degree to fruits.

It is doubtless the specialists in the growing of the non-staple crops that will suffer financially from immediate conditions of transportation cost and low prices of commodities. The grain farmer is perfectly capable of producing all the vegetables and fruits that he really needs for his own table, he can also raise his own poultry, eggs, milk, butter, and in fact all his food, at a pinch. The market gardener or fruit grower, with limited acreage of expensive land is not so situated that he can grow grain and cattle profitably, yet he can do something toward making himself independent of outside supplies. There are great possibilities in poultry for meat supply, while cooperation in the ownership of a cow is always possible in a fruit district, and several growers between them can generally supply grain and pasture enough to keep the animals.

A Mixture That Flies Shun.

Many malodorous mixtures, particularly of an oily nature, have some value as repellants for stable flies. In preparing these mixtures care should be taken that they are not made too strong, especially for use on animals that are being worked in the hot sun, as they are likely to cause overheating and often produce shedding of hair. A mixture of fish oil (one gallon), oil of pine tar (two ounces) and kerosene (half pint) has been found very effective in keeping the flies off of live stock for a short time when applied lightly, but thoroughly, to the parts of the animals not protected by nets.

Use Sulphur as Fertilizer.

Much evidence has been accumulated during the past five years to show that sulphur in many cases constitutes a valuable fertilizer agent and in many cases gives remarkable results when applied in the presence of lime. In particular, remarkable results have attended its use on alfalfa. Amounts of 100 pounds to the acre have in many cases given remarkable increase in crop.

Hydrolized Sawdust.

Hydrolized sawdust as a part of a ration for cows is apparently giving satisfactory results in Wisconsin. The Forest Service of the United States Department of Agriculture reports that cows at the Agricultural College of that state are doing as well on a ration consisting of one-third sawdust as they did when their feed was only one-fourth wood meal. That is to say, they are keeping up their weight and their milk production show no ill effects from the diet.

The U. S. Bureau of Animal Industry is considering the proposal of the Forest Service laboratory to start feeding trials with dairy animals in which the wood product will form a part of the ration and the tests will extend for an entire year at least. The hydrolized-wood feed for these cows will be made at the laboratory. So far, all the stock feed has been made from white pine sawdust. Other soft woods, particularly the western species, will be tried in the future.

Notes of Interest.

Labor saving depends more on good management than on handy devices.

The principle advantage of motor trucks in connection with farming is the saving of time; the chief drawback to their use is bad roads.

Camouflage is the best method for protecting the young chickens from hawks. Give the poultry a shaded range and their enemies will have difficulty in finding them.

Husks and cobs of sweet corn, the vines and pods of beans and the pea vines after they have been through the viner, if properly preserved, make good food for live stock, especially dairy cows.

FISH MEAL IS GOOD.

Excellent In Hog, Poultry or Dairy Rations.

The common domestic pig will never be able to write a book on table manners but he knows how to order a meal as well as anyone. He is in a fair way to demand a fish course to supplement his salad and vegetable diet. He will take his fish in the form of fish meal, the refined by-product made from sound, wholesome raw material at the sardine, tuna, and salmon canneries, or from the menhaden.

The fish meal is not to be confused with "fish scrap," a coarser by-product much used for fertilizer; the meal is made from clean, sound material and is intended to be used as food for cattle and hogs. Formerly, the cannery waste was all made into "scrap" for fertilizer purposes, but the Bureau of Chemistry, United States Department of Agriculture, knowing the extremely high protein content of the scrap, has been active in converting this material into a high-grade protein feed. The cleaned, selected portion is ground to a fine, palatable meal which may be used to replace tankage in hog, poultry, or dairy rations.

Fish meal has been recommended as a supplementary ration before now, but popular prejudice against a badly prepared product has discouraged its use. The Department of Agriculture has proved by feeding experiments that fish meal equals the high-priced tankage as a ration ingredient, and better methods of selecting and milling have removed the causes of prejudice.

The oil content of the meal adds materially to its feeding value. So far the experiments have shown that the meal does not taint the animal product, whether it be pork, butter, eggs, or milk. Moreover, by diverting the fish meals to his animals instead of supplying it directly to his land as fertilizer, the farmer loses but a trifle of its fertilizing value and gains its entire feeding value — thus making the material yield two profits in the place of one.

More White Honey.

Reports received by the crop report committee of the Ontario Beekeepers' Association from 442 members, together, with special reports from forty of the most prominent apiarists in different counties in the province, show that quality of the honey crop in Ontario this year is much better than in 1920, with a good average yield in all parts.

The total amount of white honey reported for the 47 districts considered is 1,591,278 pounds from 21,169 colonies, or an average yield of 75 pounds per colony. A small percentage of the honey reported is sold in comb honey sections. As a colony managed for comb honey will produce about half as much as one managed for extracted honey, the crop report committee has multiplied the number of pounds of comb honey by two before adding it in with the extracted.

As regards number of pounds of white honey reported, the county of Halton stands first, with 137,075 pounds from 1,193 colonies, or an average of 11' pounds per colony. Muskoka, with only [illegible] colonies, shows the highest average yield, namely, 150 pounds per colony. Algoma, with 28 colonies, and 33,800 pounds of white honey, or an average per colony of 136 pounds, is second in order of yield per colony. The report for Bruce shows that county, with the greatest number of colonies, namely 1,364, and a yield per colony of 79 pounds, or four pounds above the average yield for the total of colonies in the province mentioned in the report.

To Destroy Johnson Grass.

If during the early and mid part of summer the Johnson grass can be kept short enough to keep the plants in a weak condition, comparatively few root-stalks that penetrate deep into the ground will be formed. An oat or a wheat crop serves this purpose quite well. When the Johnson grass is in this weakened condition, ploughing in August will further weaken the plants and will entirely kill many of them. If the ground then is given clean cultivation until fall, nearly all of the grass that is not killed by the cultivation will freeze out during the winter. In case a good deal of the grass shows up after this midsummer ploughing it may be advisable to plough in late fall so as to further expose the roots to freezing.

Buying Tried Aged Bulls.

Victoria county farmers are buying tried aged bulls in preference to calves. It is an excellent plan to keep a bull in a community until he has had an opportunity of proving his getting ability. Recently a Wisconsin farmer sold his registered dairy bull to the local butcher before the production records of any of the daughters were known. During the following year 11 of the daughters averaged 15,047 pounds of milk and 671 pounds of butter.

Keep Records.

Adequate records are necessary to the efficient management of any business. The farmer, to be successful, must be a business man as well as a grower of crops and producer of live stock. As a business man he should have suitable business records.

Improve Quality of Clover.

The manner in which clover is handled after being cut, has much to do with the quality of hay obtained. The method of placing it in "cocks" is no doubt the best way, but labor is so scarce that other methods, requiring less hand labor, must be used.

Kill Out Perennial Weeds.

Perennial weeds offer the greatest resistance and require more thorough and persistent effort to destroy them. Two of the most troublesome of our common weeds are quick grass and Canada thistle. The former may be distinguished from other grasses if its characteristic features are known. Whatever method will destroy quack grass will also kill Canada thistle or any other perennial weed.

Fallowing or cultivation without a crop is the most certain method of eradication on large areas and may be used to good advantage except on sandy soils and those continuously wet or very porous. Success depends upon the depth of ploughing and frequent cultivation. The prevention of all leaf-growth in weeds means their certain death. Certain cropping systems will usually be successful with quack grass.

BREEDING PEN FOR FLOCK.

Chance of Success With Poultry Depends on Selection.

Although the rare combination of high-priced eggs and low-priced feed, so well calculated to arouse interest in the poultry-keeping game, is a thing of the past, the unusually heavy winter egg crop, due to the mildness of the present season, is making a lot of hitherto consumers begin to think of the possibility of becoming their own producers in the line of poultry products; also, many farmers who gave up poultry-keeping out of regard for the high prices for grain, have now come to the conclusion that to feed is better than to sell, and are considering hens as desirable consumers of their surplus crop.

Chances of success with poultry on the farm as elsewhere are greatly increased by a careful selection of a breeding pen for the flock. Several points should be considered, namely, the number of birds required; mature, healthy, high producing hens; standard qualities for breed and variety; time of mating; proper feeding for fertility, and comfortable housing.

The size of the pen will depend on the number of eggs desired during the hatching season. Four or five hatching eggs a week per bird and a limit of 7 to 10 days for strong "hatchability" will indicate the number required.

The breeders should have been high producers during their pullet year, late moulters, of good body capacity and with large combs and wattles.

If possible, all breeders should be of standard shape, size, weight and color for the breed and variety. "Like begets like." As increased production is transmitted through the sire in a preponderating degree, a male should always be from a high producing strain or family and not too closely related to any of the hens. The earlier the mating the better.

A satisfactory ration is a scratch feed of equal parts of corn, wheat and oats in deep litter morning and night, feeding about a quart a day to a pen of 10 to 15 birds. Egg mash composed of equal parts of cornmeal, bran, shorts and finely ground oats should be supplied in a hopper. Buttermilk or skim milk should supply the protein rather than beef scraps at this time. Water, grit, oyster shells, charcoal and grain feed must be supplied.

The lack of comfortable housing and yardage is the common reason given for having no breeding-pen. A part of the poultry house may be partitioned off with wire or lumber and used for this purpose. A yard can be cheaply made for a moderate sized flock. If the breeding flock is large, it may share the free range with the laying flock, confining each on alternate days.

Dressy Satin Suits.

Very feminine and dressy are the new satin tailored suits. A chic one is made of dark-blue satin. The skirt is rather short and narrow, save for a few gathers on the sides. The box coat opens over a gilet of ecru filet lace. This same lace is seen at the edges of the three-quarters sleeves. The lower part of the coat, the entire sleeves, the collar are heavily padded and worked in intricate machine-stitched patterns. This is called "matelasse." This garniture has been exceedingly popular in Paris and is seen on many tailleur couturiere.

Tricorn Never Disappears.

The little tricorn which never really disappears from the fashion world is quite a pet of the spring mode. It is shown with the lace eye-veil draped about it and it is shown with the spray of paradise standing up at the front. It is trimmed with a coquarde or a stiff little ostrich tip curling under the point at each side. It is a satisfactory little tailored hat at all times. And about that sprig of paradise—its sprouts out or drips off the hat at most unexpected places. Many times the dressy hat of all black has no other trimming.

FADS AND FASHIONS

For dressy blouses, sheer fabrics and crepe de chine are smartest.

A new frock of brown velvet is trimmed with lacquer red buttons.

White satin and bands of ermine appear together as a charming wedding gown.

A tricot blouse of canary yellow has the cuffs and lower part of the blouse run with metal.

An apron-shaped net veil has two deep points forming ends to tie around the crown of the hat.

One smart leather coat has collar and cuffs of otter and bands of embroidery in gold thread.

Silk fringe is used on one of the new serge suits. The fringe, in black, borders the coat of blue twill—fringe about two inches wide, hanging along the edge of the sleeves and the lower edge of the coat.

Filet lace is treated without any respect whatever by the dressmakers this spring, for they dye it any color of the rainbow that suits their convenience. Sometimes it is jade green, again it is gray, and then it is red. It takes dyes well, and really is often very effectively used in these colors.

The black satin coats that are so smart for young girls this spring look for all the world like their grandmothers'—or rather, their great-grandmothers', for no grandmothers of today's young girls wear garments like those. They are made with quilting in black or white for trimming. A deep border is quilted around the bottom sometimes, and sometimes a wide collar or a narrow collar and cuffs are quilted. They are quaint little coats, and look charming on a young figure.

Earring hats are much worn—that is, hats with trimming hanging down over one ear or both. That is just what they look like. One such hat is made of straw in tam shape, with the band about the head covered with big red stones like cherries, and with one cherry-like stone hanging pendent over each ear. This same downward droop to trimming is observable on many hats of the spring. The trimming is often in the form of a bunch of ribbons, and sometimes it is in the form of a feather ornament that hangs down.

IN GLOVE STYLES

White Glace Kids Are Ignored by the French Women.

Taste Turns Toward Suede in Pearl Gray and Light Beige in Variety of Tones.

An amusing fact, despite the prevalent belief that America looks to Paris for fashion hints, is the complete absence in the wardrobe of any well-dressed Frenchwoman of the ubiquitous white glace kid glove of America. Glace kid gloves are only worn in Paris when they are black and of gauntlet mousquetaire or 20-button cut, and these as well as evening gloves, of any cut or color, have been sacrificed to the prevailing vogue of enormous cabochon rings.

In place of white gloves, which always increase the apparent size of the hands and are so frequently incongruous with the remainder of the toilette, the Frenchwoman's taste instinctively turns toward the lovely suede gloves in pearl-gray and light beige, in a variety of tones, each one only removed from another in a varying degree.

Practically all the chic gloves developed in color are in suede and have very fine stitchings in self-tone, black suede being peculiar to mourning in France. The popular lengths are gauntlet and mousquetaire, the latter sometimes having such intriguing details as scalloped or pointed tops and narrow bands or motifs of cut steel bead embroidery. For an example, black glace kid gloves are embroidered with a fairly open triangle of cut steel beads, quite close to the scalloped edge. Another pair shows the steel bead embroidery in diamond shape on the back of the hand. Worn with these gloves was a small hat of white leather embroidered with the same pattern in jet beads.

The gauntlet glove lends itself more readily to variation in that it can be amazingly lined and edged. When you line a beige suede glove with black moire and edge the same with a very narrow but rich silver galloon you have a chic accessory to the simple black dress, which is the rage of the moment. The color of the lining is by no means limited to black, because you may find beige lined with rose, green and rust; pearl gray lined with peacock blue, and black glace lined with rust, or with gold and white brocade, or with gold cloth.

SWEATER BLOUSE, SHADE HAT

The summer costume of sweater blouse and shade hat is charming when developed in jade. The hat, of jade straw, is trimmed with large daisies.

MANY STYLES OF FOOTWEAR

Gorgeous Brocaded Black Satin and Variety of Other Slippers to Please All Tastes.

Seldom since the Middle Ages when shoes had pointed toes so long that often they were looped up and fastened at the knee has footwear assumed so many and varied modes. It would seem that the designers had ransacked their brains to produce unusual and charming effects in shoes and slippers.

Georgeous brocaded evening slippers in vivid tangerine fashioned in sandal effect, with high thin French heels, and straps which fasten with tiny jeweled buckles; or metallic brocaded slippers with low heels just like those worn by children, and with straps of the brocade; or slippers of ruby or French blue velvet, for strong colors are for the nonce preferred to black, all may be seen displayed in the footwear section of the various stores and shops.

Black satin slippers with green satin heels and jade green buttons are in vogue while for sports wear red calf is splendid, fringed tongues which pass over the tops of such slippers and down the front being considered very smart. Other sport combinations consist of white buckskin with brown or red calf vamps and straps. Really the new spring shoes rival the new spring millinery in interest.

So, take it all in all, one can readily see that quite as much attention is being paid at present to the pedal extremities as there is to the head.

Varied Hat Styles.

To attempt to describe the prevailing vogue in hats is next to impossible. Crowns and brims are high and low, narrow and wide. Trimmings are much as you desire to make them. Materials cover a wide range.

Poultry Manure Is Richest.

Poultry manure is the richest manure made on the farm, but on the ordinary farm not much attention is given it, simply because of the small amount usually made. Poultry manure is valuable chiefly for its large amounts of nitrogen and phosphoric acid, as it contains about three times as much nitrogen and five or six times as much phosphoric acid as ordinary farm manure.

TAILLEUR OF WHITE FLANNEL

An interesting tailleur of white flannel is stitched in navy and worn with a small quatrecorne of straw, swathed with blue chiffon.

THE WELL-CHOSEN JEWELRY

Decorations of the Sort Should Be Becoming to Wearer and in Harmony With Costume.

Whether one wears pearls culled from the briny deep and sold at fabulous sums, or the far more modest product of synthetic art, the intrinsic value of the jewels is as naught compared with the fact as to whether or not they are becoming to the wearer, and in harmony with her characteristics of costume, style and surroundings.

There is an indefinite je ne sais quoi about the use of jewelry, which if not handled delicately and subtly, easily slides from use into abuse. Since pearls are less arrogant in their hauteur than diamonds, they can be worn with the greater safety and good taste on many occasions, as their soft sheen never offends like the brilliant sparkle of the many faced gems, such as diamonds, rubies and emeralds.

This year's models in jewelry lend ample scope to the imagination and fanciful tastes of the lovers of jewelry, as semiprecious jewels, known as costume jewelry, are to be had in infinite variety. This consists of stones of minor value, also many compositions artistically set and vividly colored. There are strings of even and variegated designs of vivid jade, amber, coral or jet, usually worn with earrings to match. These fanciful sets are a boon to many women, since they offer so many individual styles. If the individual fails in the proper selection of the fitting thing, surely it is not the lack of that choice that guides her earring taste, but perchance ignorance of the laws of taste, good or bad, in the line of jewelry.

Just as truly as certain gowns are distinctly good taste on certain occasions, just as truly are there jewels, be they ever so handsome, that are decidedly out of keeping at certain times and places.

FASHION NOTES

It is not unlikely that the soft felt hat, untrimmed except for a single large flower, that Paris introduced for early spring wear, will be utilized all summer, for these soft felts are most comfortable for sport wear.

The campus coat made of camel's hair is a slip-on V-neck sweater that is new and fast meeting with favor. These smart sweaters come in all the popular colors, are plain knit and in waistline length that makes them particularly desirable for wear under the sport suit.

The knitted scarf daily gains in favor, for it is the logical neckpiece to wear with the sport or general utility spring suit. Scarfs of striped knitted silk give a delightful color note to the practical suit, as do scarfs of brushed wool designed in two-color block effect.

Pin-check gingham is a favored material for little girls' summer playtime frocks. Many of these practical little frocks are made exceedingly smart by a good-taste placement of embroidery done in black; others are made very dainty, yet more or less tailored in effect by collar and cuffs, belt and pocket flaps of white pique.

Many novelty effects in veils are being used, and the long-made veil seems to be enjoying more favor than the square-shaped veil. Chantilly lace veils are being accepted to a greater degree than earlier in the season, and the veil with chenille and silk border done in contrasting color is exceedingly popular with smart women. Veils as part of the hat trimming were an early spring fashion introduced by French milliners. Now separate veils are being worn in similar manner on ready-to-wear hats, draped to suit the wearer's idea of individual requirements. Considerably more color than usual is seen in veils and veiling generally, which makes for a pleasing change.

Making Footballs.

The advent of the French people into the football branch of the athletic world has opened another market for Canadian leather workers. Lieut.-Col. Hercule Barre, Canadian trade commissioner in Paris, has forwarded a suggestion that Canadian manufacturers endeavor to secure this lucrative trade. The French at present, he states, are inclined to the view that Canadian manufacturers do not make as good a football as the English manufacturers.

DEAR PEOPLE,—

We purpose taking for our text this period, "Sell Your Hammer and Buy a Horn." Our past lectures, besides being to us very profitable, have proved also to have annoyed one or two persons, namely, bums and stool pigeons. So accept our apoligies if we seem to be blowing a little, and try us out and we will prove our words. We intend during the coming months to do a little profit sharing among our friends. Whilst visiting in Toronto and West it was our good fortune to become acquainted with leather dealers of a much larger standing than some of our competitors, and also to buy in markets more reasonable. By buying in large quantities we were able to purchase the best oak tanned leather at 17c. below ordinary market price. So as an inducement for you to try out this real good quality we intend to make a big reduction in the price of our shoe repairs, so take note of the following list and give us a trial to convince you we have the real goods.

Town Price		Our Price
$1.45	Men's Soles	$1.30
.50	Men's Heels	.40
1.10	Ladies' Soles	.90
.35	Ladies' Heels	.25

Patching and Rips done with neatness and quickest possible service. All repairs done in one day.

Smoke Screens Over London.

Smokeless, sootless and robbed of the weird atmospheric effects upon which many of its landmarks depend for their charm for three months, London has begun to regain its traditional aspect with the resumption of coal burning in many of the factories. The Pittsburgh-like tone is rapidly being restored; buildings which had begun to look white and colorful are once more being coated with soot, while the medley of smoke-stacks, steeples and gables, hard and distinct without their proper haze, are sinking back into the blurred outlines in which Whistler saw them.

The city had been exposed — a very un-Venetian Venice under cloudless skies and bright sunlight—since the first days of the coal strike. The older inhabitants gave signs of relief when they saw the familiar indistinctness settle over the landscape. A gentleman in Kensington Gardens said recently, pointing to a confused pile of masonry situated near the Serpentine: "That building has been perfectly hideous all summer. The architect who designed it did not take the miners' strike into account." There is no longer ground for the complaint of strollers in Hyde Park that they had been sunburned during their stroll.

WHAT IS SOUGHT

Application for Increase in Telephone Tolls

On July 23rd, 1921, the Bell Telephone Company of Canada applied to the Board of Railway Commissioners for an order under section 375 of the Railway Act 1919, authorizing the undermentioned increases in telephone tolls which it is presently authorized to charge, which application is summarized as follows:

1st—That the rates authorized do not produce sufficient revenue to meet its dividend requirements and therefore do not carry out the intent of the judgment and order rendered by the Board in April last.

2nd—That it has found it impossible to obtain the new money required to enable it to extend its facilities, owing to inadequate earnings.

3rd—That it has approximately 16,000 applications for service which it cannot supply owing to a general shortage of equipment.

th—That unless4 capital outlays are immediately arranged for, the shortage of equipment will become so serious and so prolonged that the public will be seriously handicapped through inability to obtain telephone service.

The Napanee rates will be increased as follows: Business, individual present rate per month $2.57: new rate $3.00. Business, 2 party line, from $2.05 to $2.50 per month. No increase in residential phones.

1000 watches absolutely free. Owing to the enormous success of our previous puzzle advertisement, which gained for us hundreds of new clients, who, being so pleased with their free watch, that they are now our permanant customers, we have decided to further advertise and gain recognition in 1000 new homes, by giving away another 1000 valuable watches, to those who are clever enough to fill in the missing letters in the following phrase.

T-ES- W--CH-S A-E F-L-Y G--R-NT-ED

By correctly filling in the missing letters, you can obtain absolutely free a watch, that will equal for time any solid gold watch made, which is sufficiently proven by the large number of testimonials that we have received. Solve this puzzle correctly and comply with our simple condition of which we will write when we inform you if your reply is correct, write clearly, your name and complete address, so that we may without delay inform you of your success.

Fall Styles

The Quality that Endures is Obtainable at Our Store, and at a Price that is lower than has been possible for years.

Quality is that element in merchandise, and in men which endures.

It is the heart element which underlies the tinsel and the trappings.

It is the element which makes a great oil painting more wonderful as it grows older; a violin sweeter for the melodies it has rendered; and man greater for the adversities he has passed through.

Stripped bare of all glamour you will find "that quality" which endures, ground deeply into the policies of this big store, as it surely is found in the merchandise we carry.

THE ROBINSON CO., Limited, NAPANEE.

Wearables that One is Apt to Want This Fall.

SPORT SKIRTS STILL A FAVORITE OF FASHION

PRICED FROM $9.95 TO $25.00

Possibly never have novelty skirts been so deeply entrenched in fashion's fancy as this Autumn. Likewise never before have we been able to offer you such a wide variety of patterns and styles. This season stripes predominate, yet we find some of our better manufacturers offering plaids. Our stock features both, in pleasing array of colors and combinations. Buttons and bells offer chief means of ornamentation.

The rich autumn colorings are indeed inviting and will be most becoming when worn with fur coat, or just a plain fancy sweater.

Ask to see them.

BRIGHT SHADES PREVAIL AMONG THE NEW WAISTS

Such names as Canard, Mohawk, Yellowstone, and Blossom are found among the newer additions to our Fall Waist Stock. Many happy combinations as Navy and Canard, or Navy and Mohawk, or Mohawk with Navy Embroidery, are also obtainable.

These later shades are featured mostly in Crepe de Chene. In the light colorings as beige, flesh, and white, Georgette is still the popular fabric.

Knitted Silks are also enjoying much popularity.

Styles favor the tie-back and over-the-skirt ideas.

Now in stock are Voile and Crepe Blouses in Peter Pan styles that are smart with jumper dresses.

Prices are surprisingly low.

CORSETS

Corsets that fit properly, wear longer, as well as being more comfortable. Over a corset fitted to your own figure you will find your gown more effective and more individual.

Proper fitting Corsets need not be expensive. It is more a matter of knowing just what is correct for you to wear.

Our Corsetieres will be pleased to help you.

BRASSIERES

With women to-day a Brassiere is as important as a corset. Like corsets, it is just as important to have your correct style and size.

We are featuring some very good Brassieres at the present moment.

These are created by the most famous corset manufacturers on the continent.

Priced from 69c. up to $3.50.

CAMISOLES

Without this dainty bit of merchandise no shirt waist is as effective as it might be.

Careful dressers have found this out, and we find and unlimited demand for Silk, Satin, and Crepe Camisoles. These may be tailored or trimmed with lace and insertion.

Sometimes combinations of fabrics are featured as Crepe de Chene and Georgette. All sizes.

Prices from $1.59 to $3.50.

OUR FALL STOCK OF KIMONAS HAS ARRIVED

With cool mornings already here, and more to follow, you are bound to need a good warm Kimona.

This season our stock is replete with a splendid assortment of cloths, colors, and sizes.

We are especially featuring the "Beacon" Kimona Cloth. This comes in figured designs in shades of Mauve, Blue, Copen. They are cut in full lengths, with collars that are trimmed with silk. Silk girdles are also used.

Children's, as well as ladies sizes.

Priced from $3.25 to $10.00.

TEACHERS' CONVENTION

We are glad to join hands with the rest of the Town of Napanee to welcome the teachers to their annual Convention on October 6th and 7th.

We hope that in every way the convention will be a success, and one long to be remembered.

In your spare moments we especially invite the teachers to our store where we think you will be interested in our new Fall Stocks.

A COAT OR SUIT THIS FALL, WHICH? OUR STOCK IS THE BEST IN YEARS

CHOOSE NOW.

In Coats our stock is extensive, it covers any and all of your possible coat requirements. These Coats are all beautifully manufactured and finished to the "Kings' taste." They are well lined, some are fur trimmed.

Plain Coats in women's sizes are priced from $11.95 up to $85.00.

Fur Trimmed Coats in similar sizes range from $18.95 to $75.00.

Ask to see our Wonder Coat at $35.00.

Suits this fall and winter are the height of perfection. Our suits reflect unexcelled workmanship. They are made from the finest of good woollens. With suits it is not a question of price, but what you get for your money.

We only ask you to come and see them.

ENGLISH AND CANADIAN TAPESTRIES

SPECIAL WEEK-END SHOWING OF FALL MILLINERY FOR WOMEN AND MISSES

WE ESPECIALLY INVITE YOU TO SEE THIS DISPLAY

True, a hat is only a hat, but a hat without style is surely a poor affair. Then, too, a hat may possess wonderful style lines, and if not becoming to your particular requirements it is merely a hat. But a hat possessing style lines that are true with fashion's dictates, a hat radiating cleverness of trimming and detail, a hat that is becoming in front, back and sides, is really a joy to own. Just such hats we ask you to see at our store. Just such hats we want to sell you. This season the hats are a trifle more unusual in line. Our expert millinery staff will gladly assist you in choosing just the hat you require. For your daughter, big or small, we also have hats that are fashionably created.
